Gambling in Every Form Denounced as Curse to the People-The Result Sure to Be Moral, Mental and

the merciless eyes with which he looked upon the overburdened people of God, the hair that floated in the breeze off the Red sea, the very lips with which without straw. It was to compel this wlent. tyrant to let the oppressed go free that the memorable ten plagues were sent. Sailing the Nile and walking amid the ruins of Egyptian cities, I saw no remains of those plagues that smote the water or the air. But there are ten plagues still stinging and befouling and cursing our cities and like angels of wrath smiting not only the first born | Hell," a most appropriate selection, but the last born.

Brooklyn, New York and Jersey City, though called three, are practically one. In this cluster of cities is as good, if not better, than in any other part of men in all times, if they live or have beyond parallel. lived in a metropolis noted for dignity or prowess. Casar boasted of his native Rome; Lyeurgus of Sparta; Virgil of Andes; Demosthones of Athens: Archimides of Syracuse; and Paul of Tarsus. I should suspect a man of base-heartedness who carried about with him no feeling of complacency in regard to the place of his residence. I have noticed that men never like

Let us not war against and educational institutions. Let Philadelphia talk about its mint and Independence hall, and Girard college and its old families, as virtuous as venerable. When I find a man living in one of those places who has nothing to say in favor of them I feel like asking him, "What mean thing did you do that you do not like your native city?" New York is a goodly city, and when I say that I mean the region between Spuyten Duyvil creek and Jamaica creek in one direction and Newark flats in the other direction. That which tends to elevate a part elevates all. That giant, and he comes to the Hudson or the Connecticut river and passeses it as easily as we step across a figure in the carpet. The blessing of God is an angel,

In infancy the great metropolis was laid down by the banks of the Hudson. Its infancy was as feeble as that of Moses, sleeping in the bullrushes by the Nile; and, like Miriam, there our fathers stood and watched it. The royal spirit of American commerce came down to the water to bathe, and there she found it. She took it in her arms, and the child grew and waxed strong; and the ships of foreign lands brought gold and spices to its feet; and stretching itself up into the proportions of a metropolis It has looked up to the mountains and off upon the sea-the mightiest of the energies of American civilization. The character of the founder of a city will be seen for many years in its inhabitants. Romulus impressed his life upon Rome. The Pilgrims relaxed not their hold upon the cities of New England. William Penn has left Philadelphia an inheritance of integrity and fair dealing; and on any day in that city you may see in the manners, customs and principles of its people, his tastes, his coat, his hat, his wife's bonnet and his plain meeting house. The Hollanders still wield an influence over New York.

Grand old New York! What southern thoroughfare was ever smitten by pestilence, when our physicians did not throw themselves upon the sacrifice? What distant land has cried out in the agony of famine, and our ships have not put out with breadstuffs? What street of Damasens, or Beyrout or Madras that has not heard the step of our missionaries? What struggle for national life. In which our citizens have not poured painters have not hung their pictures?
