Much loss often occurs in keeping too much stock, especially of those that seem to eat all that they can get without any appreciable gain.

All things considered the best time for dehorning is when the calves are but two or three weeks old, when the horns have just started to grow.

Light sheep in a good condition, generally bring the best prices during the summer, and with good management are the most profitable for the farmer.

The best profit with sheep is secured by keeping whatever remains of the farm can carry the sheep, and then to keep them all of the time rather than in buying and selling out.

While there are several breeds of horses and cattle, yet as a rule, at least of the average farmer, the best plan is to only keep one or two, taking all reasonable care to improve as much as possible.

When the sheep are sheared in a good time to dip them, and this should always be done if they are infested with ticks, or they will leave the sheep and go to the lambs, often making considerable trouble.

Poor indeed will always be the lot of the farmer who raises nothing but scrub stock. It costs as much to raise inferior grades as the best, and the latter will nearly always pay for itself, the amount of the former—Olathe (Kan.) Mirror.

The blinder has caused more accidents than it has prevented. Many a horse will run from a noisy tumult behind him if he cannot see the cause, but if he faces it, and sees only horses, he is not so much frightened.

Some experiments in feeding have been made in Denmark with a view of determining the food values of corn and fine rye, bran, mangolds and boiled potatoes, coupled with the thriving qualities of the different breeds of swine. The results of these experiments show that one pound of grain is equal in value to one pound of grain in the feed mixture, but produces an inferior quality of flesh, and thereby occasions loss on the selling price. It was found that one pound of corn is equal in nutritive value to eight pounds of mangolds, but that the mangolds, when fed in this proportion, produced results in no way inferior to the grain diet, the flesh being hard and of good quality generally.

FARM NOTES.

The fowls that can best be depended upon for winter laying are the early-hatched pullets.

One advantage with wire fences is their durability. Properly constructed they will last a long time with very little repairing.

In many cases hens can be more easily induced to sit if they are placed upon the eggs as soon as it is dark, rather than in the morning.

Geese can be picked regularly every six weeks after the first of May, and the feathers secured will pay well for the trouble of keeping them.

Farmers should not sell corn until the middle of the year, as it is said considerable of the crop of 1890 was not reliable, the seed having been ruined by some cause.

The advantage of hatching guinea under common hens is that, properly managed, they are usually more generous than if the guinea hens are allowed to hatch them out and raise them.

Farmers are already predicting that the wheat yield in Atchison county this summer, will be thirty-five bushels per acre. This is an amount above the usual average. Once before in the history of Atchison county wheat yielded an average of thirty-five bushels per acre—Atchison (Kan.) Globe.

Mr. Banks, of Roxbury, one of the leading fruit growers in the country, has been successful for eight years and has always made it a business to raise and grow fruit, but at no time in his experience has he ever seen a year with such bright and splendid prospects as the present—McPherson (Kan.) Freeman.

The Platte City (Mo.) Landmark advises the boys thus: "Stick to your daddy's farm and you can be independent. It is of all the most honest and honorable calling. Some farmer boys little the time of their life, but if they are inferior business, will be able to get on to some town and accept a position as a clerk for $20 per month, or a waiter in some cheap restaurant. No, boys, stick to the old farm, and though it may seem a little tough at times, it is far better than gliding sawdust and ashes."

Under ordinary conditions, if given an average soil with good preparation and thorough cultivation, broomcorn can be made a very profitable crop. The seed should be sown on the 10th of May, after the soil has become sufficiently dry and warm to induce a good germination of the seed. The soil should be well prepared before planting the seed. It is necessary to plant the plants at first in rows, but as they grow, so that all the encouragement possible should be given to secure a vigorous start.

A rancher in the San Gabriel valley, California, is making his rapids applying with potatoes, the seed of which was planted in the fall. The result is to say, he is feeding on volunteer potatoes, a thing never heard of in any other country.

Missouri has, according to government reports, 465,520 horses, Kansas following closely with 748,100. Nebraska has 528,227 and Iowa 1,095,300, being third in the entire list. The losses the past year were 18 per cent in Iowa and Missouri, 16 in Kansas and 24 per cent in Nebraska.

Never use a long, gangling, overgrown rooster. He is nearly impossible to fill them up, and they never make a good table fowl.

One bushel of good broom corn seed will plant one acre. In a reasonably clear soil, prepared in a good, light, planting in rows will be the best, but if the land is foul with weed seeds, light planting will lessen materially the work of cultivating.

Growing pigs should be kept in a good condition. From different causes the supply in many localities is better than the average, and prospects are good for better prices in the fall.

If broom seed is to be sown by hand it will hasten germination to soak the seed in warm water twenty-four hours before planting. Have the soil prepared in a good, light, and mark out the rows three feet apart, running the furrows shallow, as only a light covering is necessary. Use plenty of seed, and thin out the plants after they are up well in the way they are so thick, this is necessary to give the remaining plants a chance to grow.

The man who possesses the most sheep of any single owner in America is Haggin, the California horse breeder. He has 100,000 sheep and last year sold 600,000 worth of spring lambs.
