THE papal encyclical has attracted but little attention in Berlin where the labor movement is altogether under the control of socialism. The socialists claim to expect to have a majority in the reichstag after the next general election. The encyclical is not altogether satisfactory to the wealthier class among the German Roman Catholics who consider that the pope lends too much encouragement to labor agitation.

THE London Times' Rome correspondent gives a gloomy view of the financial and political situations in Italy. He presents facts and figures to show that constitutionalism in Italy is falling into degradation and that the state is becoming bankrupt. Patriotism has declined since 1870 and everything is given up to personal ambition and a struggle for existence. In case of a ernment put in charge.

RICH Jewish merchants of St. Petersburg propose to follow the example of the Jewish merchants of Moscow and abandon the city entirely to the Russians. They are calling in all the money they can, much to the disgust and embarrassment of their Russian debtors, many of whom may have to go into bankruptey. In this way a good deal of private capital is leaving Russia for Berlin, Paris, London and other places. The police do what they can to stay the exodus of the wealthy, but without avail.

He firmly denied missions the diff rent groups of immigrante of different nationalities in all case, wherein their respective members and resources allow of so doing.

Secondly-Tae direction of these purishes should be confided to priests of the same nationality as the faithful. In this wise the sweetest and most cherished recollections of the fatheriand would be constantly brought back to the immigrants, who would love the church all the more for procuring for them these benefits. Thirdly-In those perts of the country where immigrants of different nationalities have settled, but in too limited numbers to form themselves into separate parishes according to nationality, it is highly desirable that the priest selected for the direction of such groups should be conversant with their respective languages. This priest should be strictly obliged to teach the catechism and evening some men returning from work to give instructions to all such different went to the city prison out of curiosity groups of immigrants in the language pecu-
