> Gen. Canto and his army won yesterday's battle by superior generalship, good hard fighting, assisted by good fortune in the killing of Balmaceda's generals and the consequent demoralization of the army and the desertion of entire regiments. Early yesterday morning the boom of cannon announced to the people of Valparaiso that a movement beyond the ordinary skirmishes had begun. The occasional loud reports of beavy guns soon swelled into one continuous roar and then it was known that the final, decisive struggle, which, at the the horror of the situation the water in cost of thousands of lives, perhaps, was junta was to be the ruling power in Chili, had begun.

Gen. Canto's position was on the hills above the race track at Vina del Mar, outside of the city. His raiders had ursions further into the country. He had absolute control of the railroad to Santiago and commanded the ordinary
