Good judges say that one of the next lo-calities to achieve distinction by jumping from a substantial town to a thriving metropolis in a few years will be the city of Superior, Wisconsin, and this, too, without the effort and struggle through which in-terior towns have passed while effecting the same result. Untila year or two ago the average man did not stop to think that Superior as a monopolist of the water and rail termini at one end of the lakes is in the same position as Buffalo at the other end. Figures are uninteresting unless given briefly, but comparisons are always impor-tant. This little Superior, credited by its last census with only 22,000 people, handled more coal last year than did Chicago; of grain, it shipped nineteen million bushels; of flour, sixteen hundred thousand barrels; was recently accidentally shot and of wool, four million pounds; of merchan-killed by a companion while hunting dise, to the value of thirteen million dol-geese near Aurora. second only to Chicago in magnitude. There is an economical reason for this condition of things. It is that the rail rate on freight sent west of Lake Michigan is one cent per ton per mile, while the water rate is one-tenth of one cent per ton per mile. This position at the extreme western end of perior its prestige, and is making it grow faster than Chicago ever did.
