Educational Department. D. M. HUNTER, Editor. Items intended for publication in this department must be handed to the County Superintendent on or before Saturday, in order to secure insertion the week following. Correspondence from teachers and those interested in educational matters solicited. Address all communications intended for this department to. D. M. HUNTER, County Superintendent Red Cloud, Neb. In the second line of last week's educational column please read "shall," "should." A mistake was made in copying from the manuscript. The blanks for teachers' monthly report to the Co. Sup't., sent out lately, will aid greatly in the closer supervision of schools, in the use of the state course of study, and in making the school work uniform and more effective. The first monthly report received was from Wm. Curry, teacher in Dist. No. 63. Do not neglect to read the county superintendent's Arbor day circular found in all the Webster county papers this week. Some good school work for exhibition at our teachers' institute has been received from Dist. No. 13; Minta Cling, teacher for the winter term. A good exhibition of school work from the schools of the county, at institute, is desired. A knowledge of what others have had their pupils do will be helpful to every teacher. If school boards would allow their teachers a day during each term in which to visit another school, it would result in good to the schools. Seeing the mistakes in another's method of teaching and management as well as those things in both worthy of commendation would be helpful to teachers in improving their own methods. There is need of more school visitation on the part of patrons and members of school boards. A teachers' meeting will be held at Bladen on Saturday, April 23, '92. The program will be printed in this column next week. Any school news or reports that teachers wish published in the educational department will be gladly received by the editor. A school officer said to me a short time ago: "I believe in keeping a good teacher in our school as long as she will stay. That is right. An active, progressive school man who looks after the best interests of the district should be kept on the board as long as he will stay. The Bole reading circle fulfilled its engagement Saturday evening, March 26th, and the subjects given in the program published in the educational column two weeks ago were well discussed. The program for Saturday evening April 9th is as follows: True manhood and womanhood, J. L. Springer. The power of an education, F. S. King. Memory and its training, Jno. M. Earner. Our own school district, D. M. Hunter. Every person has a higher or lower standard of character. There is one thing certain, the brave and noble are always remembered longer and better after death. Few can deny that to do something worthy of remembrance is one chief aim of life. Every man that is truly great in whatever sphere of life he may act has certain noble traits of character in the composition of his being. The demand for men and women of pure thought and brave action constantly increases. We can best learn to hate cowardice and a groveling spirit by studying their opposites. There can be no better, no surer method of causing our pupils to live grand and noble lives than to keep constantly before their minds, such examples as are grand and noble. JNO. M. EARNER. Superintendent Hunter is beginning to awaken quite an interest in his "Educational Department" in THE CHIEF. He should have the hearty support of every teacher in the county.—Leader.

Arbor Day, April 22. DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION, Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 25, 1892. "What a beautiful city!" Cut down all of the trees, tramp out all of the grasses from the lawns, and strew the neatly swept streets with all sorts of rubbish, and the expression is immediately changed to, "What an abominable city!" "What a lovely home!" Chop down the trees, break down the fences, smash the windows, and in the place of glass insert cast-off clothing and the expression of pleasure becomes, "What a wretched place to live!" What neat fences around our school grounds, with rows of trees by the fences, it may be a clump of them besides, with the front of the school yard changed into a lawn, with the school house painted and in good repairs, with necessary out-buildings as well kept, with the interior to correspond with the exterior, as it certainly will, the school house and surrounding grounds will become, not a matter of pleasure alone, but of profit for the silent lesson of beauty and of culture which they teach; the direction of their educational force will be reversed, and they will minister to the innate cravings of children and patrons for the beautiful—which is also the good. The best can be achieved only under the most favorable conditions; the achievement of the utmost in the direction of man-hood and woman-hood is that we wish for our boys and girls who, in a short time, are to "constitute the state." Take our boys and girls—the hope of the Nation—out, and there is little left worth living for. All men profess to wish that their children may be educated. This means that every faculty, every power, every worthy desire and taste and ambition of the children may be developed and directed and satisfied. To this end has the observance of Arbor Day in Nebraska, the state of its origin, whence it has spread to many other states of the Union, been given a place in the schools. The school exercises appropriate to the day, recitations, songs, readings, essays, historical and scientific instruction, associated with the planting of trees, shrubs, vines and seeds on the school grounds in the interest of and participated in by, the children and parents, who should as far as possible be urged to be present and to take part, are necessarily educational. I therefore suggest and urge upon county and city superintendents, teachers, parents and pupils of the state that a part of 'Arbor Day' be devoted by the school to the planting of trees, vines shrubs and seeds, accompanying the planting with such exercises as may be instructive and impressive in their character with a view to beautifying the school grounds and at the same time teaching the lessons of beauty and of the uses of beauty. I make no suggestions as to songs, selections, or subjects for essays for the day, for there is so much material everywhere which the intelligent teacher may secure for use that such a suggestion seems to me to be unnecessary. I am told that the North-Western Journal of Education contains a program and some exercises fitted for the day. I hope county superintendents will see that this circular is published in every local paper in the state, thus giving it a wide spread circulation and enlisting the press actively in this as in other educational measures. A. K. GOUDY, Supt. Pub. Instruction.
