TO MINNEAPOLIS.

Nebraskans by the Hundreds
Visit the Northern Metropolis.

On last Tuesday night the editor of THE CHIEF, along with several others of Red Cloud's republicans, wended their way to the B. & M. depot for the purpose of taking passage to Minneapolis, for the purpose of attending the National republican convention. In due season Omaha was reached and there the Red Cloud contingent was compelled to wait ten hours for a north bound train. After taking in our own capital city, the hour for the departure of the convention train came and at 5:45 the train pulled out of the Omaha Webster street depot, loaded with enthusiastic republicans who were determined on talking for their favorite candidates. After riding all night the train pulled into Minneapolis at 8:30 and then the scramble for hotel accommodations commenced. The Red Cloud people were, however, much more fortunate than many others, as they secured very nice quarters in the Brunswick Hotel, many thanks for which are due Mr. Walt Seely, secretary of the state central committee. This gentleman leased the entire house and the Nebraskans were therefore fortunate enough to have comfortable accommodations. Nothing was accomplished on Monday, except some very nice political sparring between the different adherents of Harrison, Blaine, &c.

The first session of the convention was of very little consequence, the only work done was the election of temporary officers, and the convention then adjourned until Wednesday, and then the permanent officers were elected, Hon. William McKinley of Ohio, being the unanimous choice of the convention for chairman, and was escorted to the chair amid the applause coming from twelve to fifteen thousand voices. Another adjournment was taken until Thursday and then the actual test developed Mr. Harrison's strength. The vote was taken upon the adoption of the majority and minority reports of the committee on credentials. The majority report emanated from the Harrison supporters and was carried by a good majority, and then it was that the Blaine men knew that there was no hope of the planned knight's nomination, and at Friday morning's session, Mr. Harrison was nominated on the first ballot by a vote of 535. Blaine received 182 1-6 and McKinley 182, with a few scattering votes. The mention of the names of Harrison and Blaine was the signal for great applause which lasted about thirty minutes, the enthusiasm was so great that it just took the mere mention of the two great leaders' names to make a tremendous wave of enthusiasm travel over the great sea of admirers who thronged every nook and corner of the great building. It was a great time and a greater convention, and ten minutes after the battle every republican of either faction had their coats off and were loudly praising the wisdom of the convention which nominated the next president and vice-president of the United States, viz—BENJAMIN HARRISON and WHITELAW REID. All hail to the standard bearers of the greatest and noblest political party ever organized—the grand old republican party. Success is ours in November.

Minneapolis is a great city and did herself proud in caring for her guests. The city is among the prettiest and cleanest in our republic and every attention possible was shown to the delegates and visitors. During the recesses between each session the visitors took in the sights of which Minneapolis is noted. The big mills the fine buildings, the falls, Lake Minnetonka, Lake Harriet, Lake Calhoun, the parks, the beautiful streets &c., &c., were all in turn visited by the visitor and every attention given to make their stay pleasant. The crowd was immense, but as wonderful as it may seem all were well provided for. We should like to go on and tell of all the pleasant things about the convention and the great leaders of the party present and the thousand and beautiful things about the twin cities, but the crowded condition of our columns forbids, hence we must close by saying that it was the grandest republican and most enthusiastic national convention ever held by the greatest party known to modern times and that the city of Minneapolis is to be congratulated on her hospitality extended to all. The railway facilities were splendid, the great F. E. & M. V. R.'y route as well as the "Q" hauled their passengers in good shape their trains arriving promptly. These roads are always looking after the comfort and convenience of their patrons and this time was no exception to the rule. In short the minutiae of the convention was nicely managed and everything passed off to the entire satisfaction of all present.

McKeighan is now busily trying to explain the Hastings Cadetship appointment and the ten dollar fee attachment. It will take a good many explanations to satisfy the people. It was simply unheard of.

Joe Bartley of Atkinson, Holt county, Nebraska, will be a candidate before the republican state convention for state treasurer. Mr. Bartley is a very pleasant gentleman and from what we know of him would fill the office admirably.

The platform adopted by the republican convention at Minneapolis, along with a full description will be found on the inside of today's paper. The platform is broad enough and sound enough on all subjects for every loyal American to stand upon. Read it carefully and then declare yourself to be a believer in sound government espoused by the grandest party in this country, viz: the republican party.

Blaine's Advice.
To the Republicans of the Country:
The resolution, energy and persistence which marked the proceedings of the convention at Minneapolis, will, if turned against the common foe, win the election in November.

All minor differences should be merged in the duty of every republican to do all in his power to elect the ticket today nominated by the National republican convention.

JAMES G. BLAINE.

Harrison and Reid.
There is a poetic sound in the names of the two national standard bearers of the republican party, that fills one with enthusiasm and virtually insures their election. Two names above all others in our country. Nothing can stop them from being elected in November. Harrison the statesman, and Reid the diplomat. Where could two men be found that the country honors more? Starting from the more humble walks of life, step by step they have climbed to the pinnacle of fame and this in the land of the free, for in no other land is it possible for men to gain their way to prominence except by traditional blood, must be born great to achieve greatness, but in America our greatest men come from the humbler walks, and such are the standard bearers of the republican party for 1892. Hurrah for Harrison and Reid.

Columbus Day.
The proposal that the public schools of America lead in the commemoration of Columbus day is one of the most sensible suggestions that has been made for appropriately marking the four-hundredth anniversary of our existence as the American race. There is an especial fitness in giving this prominence to the American public school. There are many reasons why every friend of free education should aid in making the Columbus day exercises a marked success. The day will be put to the highest educational use if the school children in every section of the country can be simultaneously commemorating the greatest event in secular history. The dedication of the exposition buildings and grounds will be an event of great significance. But it is not sufficient the four-hundredth anniversary be allowed to pass with an observance of merely local scope. The discovery of the new world burdened unmeasurably the horizon of men of nations. Its effect was far reaching, the whole order of the European destinies being transformed by it. It should be celebrated by a demonstration of equal extensiveness.

Blaine's Advice:
H. K. Pond, will write Hall insurance in one of the best companies represented in the west as cheap as any.

McAvoy—Miller.
On Wednesday evening, June 8, '92 at the house of the bride occurred the marriage of Wm. McAvoy and Mrs. Mary Miller, in the presence of a goodly number of invited friends, Rev. Geo. O. Yeiser officiating. After many congratulations and good wishes being extended the guests were invited to the supper room where an elegant luncheon was served. Many rare and beautiful souvenirs were presented by the friends. Mr. and Mrs. McAvoy have been residents of this city for a number of years past and their geniality have won for them a wide circle of friends who earnestly desire a future of happiness and prosperity.

Makes the Weak Strong

The marked benefit which people in run down or weakened state of health derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla, conclusively proves the claim that this medicine "makes the weak strong." It does not act like a stimulant, imparting feebly strength from which they must follow a reaction of greater weakness than before, but in the most natural way Hood's Sarsaparilla overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, purifies the blood, and, in short, gives great bodily, nerve, mental and digestive strength.

Fagged Out
"Last Spring I was completely fagged out. My strength left me and I felt sick and miserable all the time, so that I could hardly attend to my business. I took one bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it cured me. There is nothing like it." R. C. BRONSON, Editor Enterprise, Belleville, Mich.
"I derived very much benefit from Hood's Sarsaparilla, which I took for general debility. It built me right up, and gave me an excellent appetite." Ed. JENNINGS, Mt. Savage, Md.
N. B. If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to buy anything else instead. Insist upon having
