HIS FIRST SPECULATION.

A Man Who Gambled in Stocks Withou Knowing What He Was Doing.

"I never speculate," said a man who has sequired a fair share of the world's goods, and who enjoys them as much perhaps as any other man similarly sitnated. "And yet I made my first real start on a speculation. I won at it and quit ahead of the game, as gamblers say. I have remained ahead of that game ever since.

"It was out in California that I was led into my speculation. It was in the days when mining stocks went up into the sky like rockets and came down like sticks, just as certain men wanted them to do. I went out there to make my fortune, but in some way it would not make. I really believe in luck, for 1 did have the worst possible kind of luck, and then of a sudden, but will come to that later.

"Have you ever heard of the man who was so poor that he always earned his breakfast; ate it; earned his dinner; ate it; earned his supper; ate it; and then alept where it did not cost anything? Well, I was a good deal poorer than that man, for I ate my breakfast and then earned it. It was demoralizing, you may be sure. But I happened to meet a man in San Francisco who was making a big stir out there in those days. He was throwing stocks wherever he pleased, and that meant every-where. The way that man made money took everyone's breath away. For some reason he took an interest in me-perhaps it was because I could not make a cent where he could make millions. " 'Young man,' he said to me one day, do you want to make some money?" "I thought I did. I thought it so phatically that I impressed him with my earnestness.

"'Well,' he said, 'give me one handred dollars and I'll fix it for you so that you can make something.'

"'A hundred dollars!" I said. 'If had a hundred dollars I'd get out of this country. I haven't one hundred cents.' "'You haven't, ch? Then I'll lend it

"'I never could pay you,' I said.
"'Yes you can. You can pay mo some day. Just sign a note for it. Business is business, you known. Then go away and don't ask any questions. Just keep still till I get ready to talk." I went away, no richer and no poorer, save that my name, which wasn' worth anything to anybody, was at the end of a note for one hundred dollars. "I did not know much about stocks and I did not care much about them. I only knew that there was a madness in the San Francisco market a few days later. Some stocks went up and some went down. The stocks went up out of whole market and blew it away.

"A few weeks later I met my friend.

"O, by the way," he said, 'I have a note of yours in my pocket.'

"'Yes,' I gulped, feeling the strings of my heart tighten, 'but I can't pay it now. I warned you-"'Never mind about that now,' he said. 'Here's your note. Now I'm go-ing to give a back to you on one con-dition—that you promise me never to or made him the promise.

"'Young man,' he said then, 'you have been in the biggest hell's game that ever was played in this market. You have won. I knew you would win. That's why I let you try it. But, young man, and he raised his hand, pointing eloquently with his finger, 'you never in the world could have won it if you hadn't been on the inside. That's why I made you promise.'
"Then he looked at a memorandum, wrote me out a check which made me speechless, and sent me away. I do not to this day know what is the process of gambling in stocks."—N. Y. Tribune.

PEASANT LIFE IN SICILY.

A People Noted for Their Sobriety and In dustry

One of the elements of progress among from the poor miner, goes to the continent and comes back amazed at the dif-ference between the style of life and culture at home and abroad. He is fair have been appointed: Frank A. looked upon as an authority, insists on Barton, Pawnee City, education; E. the children's being sent to school, knows all about provident societies, and yet has lost none of his love for his native island. So strong is this lov that Sicily figures last on the list of Italian emigration, and though the figures have slightly increased of late years they do not amount to six thousand for the entire island.

When Italy shall embrace the American or Swiss system of national defense and abolish standing armies which are her ruin financially, Sicily will probably take her place first on the list of "high farming" countries in Europe, for her sun and soil remain her own, her children are among the hardest tollers and most frugal livers on the face of the earth; drunkenness is unknown among peasants, even when they have wine at will; and as far as crime goes, though great, it is on the decrease—including always and everywhere the mining populations.—Sig-nors Vedova Mario, in Chautauquan.

NEBRASKA STATE NEWS.

Inter-State Commerce Viet OMAHA, Neb., June 1.—Daniel Far-rell, Jr., an Omaha jobber, and his ship-ping clerk, Edward H. Sharp, were placed under acrest yesterday on an in-dictment found by the federal grand jury, charging them with violation of the inter-state commerce law. Mr. Farrell, in explanation, said the case, as he understood it, referred to a carload of strups and jellies shipped to Salt Lake City. He said the transac-tion was entered into between his shipping clerk and an inspector of the Western Railway Weighing association without his knowledge. The inspector, Mr. Sharp asserts, hinted that he might be induced to manipulate the rate, and asked: "How much will there be in it

An agreement was finally reached, after some dickering, that the inspector should receive $10 for his part in the

The car in question was loaded with about 22,000 pounds of jellies and 7,000 pounds of sirup. It was billed as a car-load of sirup. The saving by the incor-rect billing was 20 cents per 100 pounds. Mr. Farrell discovered what his clerk had done, and instructed the clerk to make out a correct bill of lading, and the local freight agent of the Union Pacific corroborates this statement For some reason the car was sent through on the manipulated bill. CONVENTION HALL.

Dedication of the Building at Minneapolis to the Republican Convention-J. Stoat Passett Temporary Chairman.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 7 .- The republican convention hall of '92 was opened to the general public last night and was an event long and pleasingly anticipated in local and musical circles —a grand concert by a chorus of 1,000 voices supported by the Second regi-ment band of Chicago. A vast audience, numbering over 12,000 people and fill-ing every seat for distances as far as the eye could reach, surveyed the in-spiring scene, which bids fair to become memorable political battle ground. Striking changes have been made in the interior appearance of the exposition building, which is the boast of Surrounding the walls on every side rise seats in tiers, giving to the hall a greater width than depth, with rectangular corners. The decorations as prepared for the convention are very simple but very beautiful. At four con-

The hall may be considered to be half as large as was the old, unwieldly, temporary structure built at Chicago for the republican conention of 1880. In that hall the conention sat lengthwise of the building. ast night, however, the stage, with ts great military band, its piano and ts 1,000 voices, spreading and retreating to the eastern upper walls, filled an entire breadth of the chamber.

At 8 o'clock upon the conclusion of the overture of the opera of Rienzi, the audience was well seated and received the opening number with every evi-dence of delight. Various choruses and solos preceded the speech of Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, whose coming was hailed with such an uproar as only many thousand persons can make.

When the night session assembled the Harrison men made their fight in the national committee on Fassett and the result was twenty-nine votes for Fassett and ten for Cullom. Mr. Fassett will be temporary chairman of the national convention. This was a test vote and shows that Blaine men are in control of the committee. The defeat was accepted and the nomination made unanimous.

CONGRESS.

Epitome of the Proceedings of Houses the Past Week. Houses the Past Week.

The senate was not in session on the M....
After some morning business the house went is to committee of the whole on the post office appropriation bill. The pending amendment was that offered by Mr. Blount of Georgia, reducing by £2,549,000 the appropriation for transportation by railroad routes and providing that the postmaster-general be authorized to readjust the compensation to be paid after July 1, 1856, for transportation of the mail on railroad routes by reducing the compensation to all railroads for the transportation of mail ten per cent from the rate established on the basis of the average weight fixed and allowed by the act of June 17, 1278. Rejected—57 to 124. Pending action the committee rose and the house adjourned.

THE senate was not in session on the 4th....
The post office appropriation bill was before the house. On motion of Mr. Henderson, of North Carolina, an amendment was adopted authorizing the postmaster-general to provide for the transportation of official matter to any government department over railroads or by express companies when he can do so at a saving to the government and without detriment to the public service. The committee then arose and reported the bill to the house and it was passed. The Hatch anti-option bill was then brought up, soon after which came the sensational news that Mr. Blaine had resigned. The house was in more or less confusion and adjourned without action on the bill.

CHARACTERISTIC duliness prevailed in the senate on the 6th. The consular appropriation bill was brought in and laid aside, and Mr. Vest bill was brought in and laid aside, and Mr. Vest addressed the empty benches on the bill to place wool on the free list. No action was taken.... The house passed the Hatch anti-option bill. The senate amendments to the river and harbor bill were non-concurred in and conferces appointed. A bill was passed appropriating $50,000 for a pedestal for a monument to Gen. W. T. Sherman. The senate amendments to the navy bill were non-concurred in. Bills were also passed admitting New Mexico and Arizona to the dignity of statehood. The legislative appropriation bill was brought in and passed under suspension of the rules. A resolution was introduced calling for the adjournment of congress on Monday, July 4. Referred.

The dipolmatic appropriation bill was begress on Monday, July 4. Referred.

The dipolynatic appropriation bill was before the senate on the 7th. Mr. Hale explained that the amendments recommended by the committee on appropriations as to envoys extraordinary and ministers plenipotentiary were simply re-establishing the status under the extending law. Those amendments were all agreed to, including the following: Increasing from (25,00) to $33,000 the appropriation for the commercial bureau of the American republics; in creasing from $60,00 to $20,000 the appropriation to meet unforeseen contingencies in the diplomatic and consular service, and striking out the provision that part of the amount shall be paid in settlement of any claim of any foreign power; inserting an item for $65,000 for the share of the United States in the expense of a preliminary survey for a continental railway; inserting an item of $50,000 in addition to $175,000 herestofore appropriated for the international beautiful and the content of the content of the international powers. 000 heretofore appropriated for the international boundary line survey between the United States and Mexico, increasing salaries of consuls-general at London, Paris, Havana and Rio Janeiro from $5.00 to $6.00. The bill was then passed... The aggricultural appropriation bill was reported in the house. The urgent deficiency bill was considered in committee, but without action the house adjourned. In the senate on the 8th Mr. Call gave notice of his intention to address the senate June 15 of his intention to address the senate June if on his resolution for an investigation as to whether railroad companies interfere with the election of United States senators. The pension deficiency bill was laid before the senate and referred to the committee on appropriations... The house was in committee of the whole on the agricultural appropriation bill. On the committee rising the bill was passed. Mr. McRae again called up his bill amending the act of September 29, 1899, forfeiting certain lands granted for the purpose of aiding in the construction of railroads. No quorum being present the house adjourned.

The senate had a short session on the 9th, but accomplished a good deal of business. The urgent deficiency bill was passed. The legislistive and agricultural bills came from the house, also the New Mexico and Arizona state-hood bills, all of which were referred to committees. Morgan and Jones of Arkansas spoke on the silver question. The senate then adjourned until the 18th. In the house Mr.

on the silver question. The senate then ad-journed until the 13th....In the house Mr. Coates, of Alabama, called up a bill modifying the revised statutes so as to dispense with proof of the loyalty during the war of the rebel-lion as a pre-requisite to being reported or ad-mitted to the pension rolls of any person who would otherwise be entitled therato; nor shall would otherwise be entitled thereto: nor shall proof of lovalty be necessary in any application for bounty land, where the proof otherwise shows that the applicant is entitled thereto; provided that no soldier restored or admitted to the pension roll shall not extend to any person under the disability imposed by the fourteenth article of the amendment of the constitution. Passed Mr. E. B. Taylor summoned up the bill defining the crimes of murder in the first and second degree and manslaughter in places and on waters under the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States. On motion of Mr. Culberson a bill (originally introduced by Mr. O'Neill, of Missourt.) was passed permitting poor persons to sue in the United States courts upon affidavits, and authorizing the court to appoint counsel. RENEWING FURNITURE.

Valuable Suggestions for the Use of In almost every household there are articles, which, as far as utility goes, are just as good as new, but which are defaced, faded or shabby-looking merely because the finish on them has been worn or otherwise injured. To throw these away or pile them in the garret is an out-of-pocket sort of economy, and one which wise housekeepers will not indulge in, except for good and sufficient

It is a very easy matter to reconstruct. enovate and refit household belong ings, and if the few necessary appli-ances are kept ready at hand, the task is neither unpleasant nor tedious, but rather amusing. A bright-witted and economical housewife, not long since, invited one of her friends to what she called a "painting party," the friend being the only guest. An attie room was fitted up with a bench, paint pots and brushes, and here the visitor was invited to seat herself as a spectator at the organization of the seather and the organization of the seather and the organization of t the evolution of a very old-fashioned and almost hopeless-looking bedstead. It was a four-poster—a genuine old-timer. While it was badly scratched and not by any means in a presentable condition, it had great possibilities.

The old, scratched paint and varnish were speedily removed with sand-paper, which was not a difficult operation, a all of the posts were turned. Then the pieces were carefully dusted off and coated with white enameled paint. The operator had tried the enamel such as is sold in the stores, and found it answered admirably; but as it was much too costly for use in any quantity, she tried a plan of her own, which answered the purpose very well.

Some white lead was mixed with very fine coach varnish, thinned with turpentine until of the proper consistency, and this was used in place of the enamel. It made a heavier body, and worked quite as easily, but required much more time to dry. The first coat seemed to sink into the wood, and filled up all of the cracks and crevices. When this was perfectly hard, which required some days, it was sand-papered off with fine sand paper until perfectly smooth, care being taken not to rub too deep, as only the roughness and possible specks or bubbles in the paint were to be removed. This finished, a coat of enamel, made quite thin with turpentine, was applied. A number of articles were worked over in this way, some of them receiving three and others but two coats of the paint, the difference in the wood regulating the amount of paint required. One piece had to have four coats before it was satisfactory.

There are many persons who would like to use enamel paints, but, like the party mentioned, find them too expensive. When this is the case, the best white lead, as it comes from the keg, may be mixed with good varnish until smooth and somewhat pasty. Fine turpentine should then be added, to put it in working order. A comfortably thick coat at first, well dried and sand papered, then one or more thinner coats, will put in admirable condition any article of furniture not hopelessly battered or broken. After the first coat is on, putty should be mixed quite soft, and, with a putty knife, all holes, deep seams or cracks should be filled and carefully smoothed off. If this is done, the paint will cover perfectly, and no trace of the putty will be visible.—N. Y. Ledger.

Walking Dresses.

In answer to the protest made by practical women against long skirts for the street, Felix has designed several robes trotteuses or walking dresses of woolen stuffs, made with a round skirt that comes near to the ground, yet just escapes touching. The back is cut bias, in the popular fashion, and it is rounded off at the foot to avoid the necessity of lifting or of tucking up. A favorite model has this skirt of flax gray serge, which is easily brushed, and does not spot, ornamented with applique festoons of dark green velvet. A blouse waist of plisse surah of dark myrtle green shade is confined by a Russian belt of silver and gold galloon fastened by a Kremlin buckle. A Figaro jacket of the gray serge, with large sleeves of the gray serge, with large sleeves trimmed with green velvet, is worn over the blouse when in the house, but is replaced for the street by a longer casaque of serge, with revers, collar, and cuffs of green velvet. Similar dresses are made in dahlia serge, the violetrouge shade now so popular in Paris, with trimmings of black velvet.—Harper's Haxar. per's Basar.
