KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live bet-ter than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the tests, the refreshing and truly ant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect lax-ative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all drug-gists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

SHEPHERDS TURNING TO MUT-TON FOR PROFIT.

Wool as a Secondary Consideration-Young Stock in Winter-Pig Pens-Horse Language-Dairy Notes and Household Helps.

Roots for Sheep,

The crying need of our great sheep industry is a better mixed food ration than is generally supplied by owners, and more protection from the inclemencies of the weather.

There is no country on the globe that is going to surpass the United States for sheep raising, and the interests in this line are already of such imposing magnitude that it is almost the leading farm industry. It is not only wool raising that makes the work so valuable, but in many parts of the country adjacent to good markets, owners of sheep are doubling their incomes by raising superior mutton for the market as Breeds of sheep are being raised which will supply excellent mutton and good wool. The wool, of course, is not so good as the finest grown by those who raise sheep only for this, but is of such a character that it is in fair demand at reasonable prices.

Sheep are naturally hardy, says the Farmers' Guide, and can thrive off poorer food and with less protection than most farm animals, but it does not follow from this that they do not improve under good treatment and repay the owner for an extra outlay expended upon them. On the contrary it has been pretty well demonstrated in many parts of this country that sheep require good food and good care if they are to be very profitable. The grumbling generally comes from those who expect the animals to shift for themselves and make an income for their owners while they do nothing. This is more than can be expected. It is necessary to look ahead and see that food and good food, is prepared for the sheep the year round, and also good shelters.

Formerly sheep raisers never thought of sowing and harvesting crops for their animals. They were supposed to get their living somehow on the prairies and among the mountains. But it is pretty poor economy to attempt that sort of thing nowadays.

We need to grow crops for our sheep and to supply them with a mixed ration, a diversified food. In this ration roots play a most important part. They supply the amount of water which all animals need when fed dry food, and dry food must be fed in the winter time. They should be grown extensively for winter use. and should then be cut or mashed so that they can be mixed with the hay. bran, oats or mili feed. These roots will prevent stomach troubles and make the animals gain more from their solid food than if not given at all. It does not answer to make them take copious draughts of water with their meals, for this washes down a great deal of the food without being digested and assimilated. The result is-there is a decided waste. Roots are also nourishing and they are of great value to ewes when giving milk. Sugar beets, mangles, rutabagas and turnips, are all of inestimable value to the flock, and they should be raised for winter use in season, if sheep diseases are to be avoided.

Mixed feeds for sheep are always superior to plain foods, and should always be given when possible. It is in the mixed food that roots attain their greatest value, for they make the mixture more digestible. By giving a certain amount of mixed food each day regularly, with roots included, it is estimated that one saves fully twenty per cent in food: in other words, eighty per cent of mixed food is equal to 100 per cent of plain.

The pens that have given us the best satisfaction are small, inexpensive, insignificant affairs, costing from $5 to $10 each. The strongest point in their favor is health, fewer hogs being kept under one roof; this one point of health itself should overbalance any objections that might be urged against them. When the ground around the pen becomes foul by continued occupation, these pens are easily moved to a fresh location, and the ground previously occupied by them plowed up and a crop or two raised from it, thereby purifying the soil. After two or three years it can be again seeded to grass and the pens returned to their original location.

A rotation of hog-pens once in two or three years goes farther in the direction of maintaining fertility than anything I have ever tried. With this kind of pen, or as many pens of this kind as may be necessary for the number of hogs; the original outlay for pens is reduced to a mere nothing in comparison with the large hog house. They will pay for themselves every year they are used. With this system less than half the labor will keep the pens clean; they are warmer, the air is purer, the young pigs are healthier, and large numbers at any season are prevented from piling together. At farrowing time each brood sow is isolated from the others, thereby being removed from anything liable to make them irritable or restless.

Bear in mind I have no wish to hog-house as he desires. I am talking to farmers who may think as I used to, that an expensive hoghouse is necessary to raise fine pigs. And while recommending cheapness and economy in the way of hogpens | look like new.

FARM AND HOUSEHOLD. I do not wish to be understood as arguing that "anything is good enough for a hog." The essentials to be secured are health, comfort, warmth and cleanliness, and any outlay of money that goes beyond this must be regarded in about the same light as a prominent breeder, regards his expensive 30x60 hoghouse. Said he: "It's not much account for swine, but it's awful nice to show to visitors."-Extract from paper by Geo. Wylie, Leeds, Wis. at a farmers' institute.

Young Stock in Winter.

It is the worst possible manages ment to let calves, colts or any other young stock rough it during theil first winter. Not only does the cold pinch, but there is the great difference between the succulent grast that they get in the summer and the dry forage of the winter ration. It is true young stock have generally good appetites, but unless they have some grain to keep up animal heat they cannot eat enough of rough fodder to keep them in good condition. The rough, staring coat is evidence how digestion has been injured and the future growth stunted for all time. No matter how well fed afterwards, the damage by the first winter's neglect is never overcome. It is because the stunting of growth is always the sign of impaired digestion that it is so difficul? to change to thriftiness. The young animal, if kept warm and well fed, makes much more profit from good feeding than it will when older. In truth, however, if the digestion be kept good the first winter it will be better during the animal's entire life. A little linseed meal is almost essential for all young stock in winter. It keeps their coats smooth because it keeps their digestion good. But needs also to be supplemented by warm stabling. - American Cultiva-

Horse Language. My horse has a low whinny which means "water." and a higher-keyed. more emphatic neigh means food. When I hear these sounds I know as definitely what she means as if she spoke in English. This morning. passing along the street, I heard the same low whinny, and looking up saw a strange looking horse regarding me with a pleading look. I knew he was suffering from thirst, and no language could make it plainer. The language of the lower animals is not all articulate. It is largely a sign language. The horse does a deal of talking by motions of the head and by his wonderfully ex-pressive looks. He also upon occasion talks with the other extremity. A peculiar switch of the tail and a gesture, as if threatening to kick, are equine forms of speech. The darkey was not far wrong who said of the kicking mule: "It's just his way of talking."—C. P. Five Famous Etchings.

The Passenger Department of the New York Central has just issued a series of five beautiful etchings, which artistically outrank anything of the kind ever issued by a railroad company, while the absence of any advertising feature renders them suitable for hanging in your office, library or home.

A brief description of each, with a glance at their titles, is all that is necessary to obtain a fair idea of the pictures.

No. 1 is "Washington Bridge," which spans the Harlem River at 181st Street—one of the finest bridges in the world, and a marvel of engineering. In the distance is Highbridge, the Croton Viaduct. In the foreground a characteristic river scene, that will be recognized by any one at all familiar with the locality.

The famous Empire State Express Engine "999" which occasioned such widespread comment at the World's Fair, occupies the top half of the card, and below appears the old "DeWitt Clinton," affording a truly remarkable example of the progress of railroad science in the past fifty years.
