IN MEMORIAM.

Lines inscribed in the memory of Ralph Hartwell, who died December 25th, 1894.

A beautiful autumn approaching its close;
A house filled with comforts which made hearts rejoice;
When lo, to their sorrow a shadow arose
In hushing to silence a dear, gentle voice.

The boyhood life blossomed and brightened each year,
Revealing new charms for the loving to prize.
His presence afforded some sunshine and cheer,
And troubles grew less at his love-beaming eyes.

They watched in his sickness, exhausted their care;
They nurtured their hope when in conflict with fear.
Souls off to the Father were lifted in prayer,
While harrowed with anguish at ill omened tears.

At length a fell blow from the conquering hand
His spirit released from its earthly career,
And leaving the hopes he had carefully planned,
Took others befitting his better sphere.

The days come and go, bringing labor and care,
And oft to give comfort appears some kind face;
But hearts no less yearn for the absent and dear
Again to enfold to their loving embrace.

The burden, how heavy; it would some relief
Might reach to the hearts that mourn comforts fled,
And grant them the healing so needed from grief,
That rests serene upon them because of their dead.

The frail dust is sepulchered through which once smiled
A love endowed spirit by love alone sent.
The loss which they suffer is gain to their child,
A lamb given back to the shepherd who lent.

Kind Father who willingly doth not afflict,
Who loveth all stricken souls, bowed and forlorn,
Give faith in the promise Thou doth not restrict,
And for a night's weeping grant joy in the morn. —E.H.

Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. On Sunday evening the angel of death visited our midst and took Miss Emma Wheatly from this world to that bright land beyond. She had a stroke of paralysis about two weeks ago and could not move or speak, and though she could not say a word she could not say a word she seemed perfectly at rest and waiting for the Lord to come and take her home where she could meet her dear mother and sister who have gone before. She leaves a father, brother and sister to mourn her loss besides a large circle of friends who have been with Emma from infancy and knew her only to love her. Mr. Wheatly and children have the sympathy of the entire community in this hour of sorrow.

IN MEMORY
She needs no house nor home below
She's gone to where the righteous go,
Her spirit soared on angel's wings
To see the Lord the king of kings
And wear a fadeless crown.

The sudden exit grieved us sore
On earth we'll see her face no more.
The gentle form is laid away
To wait the resurrection day
When the last trump shall sound.

Death often breaks our tender ties
But God will bid the dust arise,
Then we expect one day to share
Unbroken joy with her, up there
Love has no broker ties.

Smiles we never shall forget
Enters in our mind day by day
Never to see her in this world again.
