

An Afflicted Child

Painful Salt Rheum Covers Her Head

Happy and Healthy Since Taking Hood's Sarsaparilla

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass."
"My little daughter, Birdie, now two and one-half years old, has been a great sufferer from salt rheum since she was about two months old. A very painful eruption covered her neck, ears and entire scalp. I consulted physicians and tried many remedies, but without avail, until a friend recommended Hood's Sarsaparilla. Before the first bottle was taken the eruption had disappeared, and now none remains, while the child's general health is much improved. I heartily recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all suffering from this disease." Mrs. LIZZIE BUCKHOLZ, Atchison, Kansas.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The many sensational newspaper articles which have recently gained currency derogatory to Congressman McKeighan's health were subjects of ridicule. Tuesday when that distinguished gentleman who it has been stated was totally blind in a debilitated and dying condition with Bright's disease, &c., boarded the train accompanied by his daughter Edith and Mary Stewart and sped away for the city of Washington, where he will serve out his term as congressman from the big 5th. As a matter of fact, Congressman McKeighan suffered cruelly with a severe case of supraorbital neuralgia, which resulted in iritis. When the latter disease developed, he was placed under the care of an oculist in Lincoln at the instance of his family physician. His eye is now nearly well, and he is otherwise in perfect health. He eats heartily, sleeps well and has about regained his normal health and strength.

The Blair Courier has many marked improvements under its new and able management. We are pleased to note the success of our worthy contemporary.

Renovation.

This week has witnessed some wonderful changes in the Bon Ton bakery and cafe. In fact Messrs Kaley and Campbell with all their help have worked diligently, repairing and moving everything in perfect order and placing furniture in a permanent position for future usefulness. Some handsome new fixtures have been added; the old carpets have been supplanted by the latest and best; the walls are adorned with pretty pictures, and the entire interior has a decided appearance of neatness, that cannot help but serve attractively to their patronage. Then, too, the kitchen has been nicely repainted, and many other minor improvements too numerous to mention. Aside from these improvements the show cases in front are entirely different than ever before, and certainly exhibit the choicest and most varied line of goods to be found in the valley. Their baker Mr. Bense is said to be, and doubtless is the finest artist in his line that ever came to Red Cloud, and his superior work is definitely suggested upon the first glance at his fancy pastry work. Besides the enormous quantity of pastry work, he turns out daily 500 loaves of bread. A goodly portion of this is shipped away to various towns in every direction, and a sufficient amount retained to supply the local trade.

Messrs Kaley and Campbell are very anxious to have their patrons visit their various departments and earnestly request the ladies to call and witness the process of bread baking any morning they may desire. They will be explained everything in connection with the baking process, and can ascertain precisely the methods employed in preparing eatables for a critical public.

Ayery's Cherry Pectoral is known by its works. The experience of half a century proves that no other preparation of the kind stops coughing and allays irritation of the throat and bronchial tubes so promptly and effectually as this.

Two hundred men from all over the county joined in a grand wolf hunt yesterday and surrounding Batin township six wolves were hemmed in and several hundred Jack rabbits. Six of the wolves managed to get away through an opening in the ranks, but the poor rabbits suffered instant death. Another hunt will take place in Red Cloud township soon.

Tomorrow is Groundhog Day. Watch for his shadow.

Who Is It

[D. F. Parker of Ogden sends THE CHIEF the following article that will be of interest to our readers.]

Chas. L. Fair has since his father's death received an average of twenty letters a day from people who have untold confidence in his generosity and willingness to divide his share of the late Senator's wealth with folks he does not know.

"Not only do they write me letters," says Mr. Fair, "but they insist on coming and seeing me. Only yesterday an old man whom I don't know rushed up to the door and handed me a poem, saying he was a poet, and desired me to read it. Then he rushed away. He seemed to be crazy. Many of these people appear to be cranks of a harmless kind."

Among the first letters Mr. Fair received was this:

RED CLOUD, Neb., Jan. 6, 1895.
MR. FAIR:—You are now, as I glean from the papers, a young man of enormous wealth. I am a school teacher, the daughter of a farmer, and have a voice of marvelous sweetness, so all my friends tell me. Could I ask so great a favor as that you will give me $10,000. With this sum I could go to Europe and cultivate my voice still further. Dreams of Patti and Emma Abbot are before me. I have never had the pleasure of seeing you, but I hope to do so when I have made myself famous the world over.

Let me say you will never have reason to regret the act, for everybody says, and I am convinced, that I have such talents as shall enable me to rise far above the horde of would-be singers who are but common-place. Like all Californians are, I know in advance that you are generous, and therefore have a good hope that you will send me the money. Address Lock Box 7, Red Cloud. L. N. W.

Our readers will doubtless wonder who is the author of the letter to the rich Californian signed "L. N. W." We had always said there was great musical talent in Red Cloud, but the fact is stated by this very modest girl implies that Webster county can trot out a second Emma Abbot or Patti very cheap—only $10,000. The article referred to appeared in a San Francisco paper, and for reasons dictated by expediency we will withhold the author's name this week. Of course we wish this frivolous young rural school marm success, and would be glad to have this opulent Mr. Fair take her to his bosom, provided he would move to this county, subscribe for THE CHIEF, and give us his patronage. In this event we have no doubt he could easily get action on his millions, for there are a great many sweet girls we know of here who would come as near making a Patti ashamed of herself as "L. N. W."

A clear case of domestic infelicity was witnessed at the depot Monday night, when a Russian girl recently married to a Red Cloud fellow took a notion to leave her husband. For a long time the two stood at the ticket office window; she attempting to purchase a ticket for Orleans, and he protesting savagely, and occasionally giving vent to his rage with naughty adjectives in deep foreign gutturals. Their quarrel terminated suddenly when the train arrived, for as he held her from the window she gave him a vicious slap in the face, and bluffed him fairly out. Then she secured a ticket, checked her goods and boarded the train for Orleans where her brother resides, and her new husband walked sorrowfully home soliloquizing on the old subject, "Is marriage a failure?"

Jasper Bailey, a young man who has recently made his home with Widow Williamson across the river, is in very deep trouble. He wanted to go to his home in Lushton, and made a self negotiable loan for a horse belonging to John Maraden, and rode away. No one knew where he went, and Sheriff Runchey was put on his trail. Sheriff Runchey knew nothing about the direction the fellow had gone, but with his accustomed successful shrewdness in hunting criminals, he located the horse dealer at his home in Lushton, northeast of here, and brought him back for trial. Bailey waved examination and was bound over to the district court in the sum of $500, in default of which he now lies in the county jail. He is said to be lacking of good sense, and a fitting subject for an asylum. We will presume that his case will not terminate seriously, for it is evident he didn't really intend to steal the horse.

PARADISE.

Oh, not afar in distant skies
The shining hills of heaven rise.
In loving hearts lies paradise,
And loving words are keys that open
The portals to that land of hope.

Oh, planning hearts that droop and sigh,
To watch the bitter days go by,
Heaven itself is close and nigh,
Ever about us angels go,
Thriving these toilsome ways below.
We do not see them—do not know.

But hearts that throbb with loving thought,
And lips that whisper heaven taught,
The loving words the Master brought—
These are the angels we would know,
And these the shining feet that go
Making a paradise below.

Oh, not afar in distant skies,
But close at hand, the blessing lies—
In loving hearts lies paradise.
Look up, sad soul! the world is fair,
And heaven and love are everywhere!

KENILWORTH IVY.

If You Want the Real Thing, Never Go to Kenilworth Castle For It.
"Could I get some slips of Kenilworth ivy anywhere about the ruins?" I heard a woman ask of the lodgekeeper at Kenilworth castle one day," said a traveler.

"You are an American, aren't you, madam?" asked the keeper, with a smile.
"Why, yes, but what of that?" responded the lady, with some slight embarrassment.
"All American ladies come and ask me for Kenilworth ivy after they have searched in every nook and corner of the ruins for it," explained the keeper. "They have told me how common it is in America and how much it is prized, and generally explained that they have promised to take some of the real thing back from Kenilworth ruins for friends at home. They tell me they expected to find the ruins of Kenilworth castle overgrown with the beautiful 'Kenilworth ivy,' and that it is generally supposed in America that such is the case, and that the ivy first came from here or is named after these ruins because of its abundance here."

"The woman nodded assent to all this, and the keeper continued:
"But what you know as 'Kenilworth ivy' doesn't grow in or about Kenilworth ruins, as you've no doubt discovered." And he smiled again, and the woman also smiled in an embarrassed way, for she had been hunting every inch of the ruins over, looking for the plant. "From the description of the plant which Americans give me I think it is what we call ground or wood ivy that you treasure so much. It has a small, bright green leaf and bears a tiny white flower. It grows on the ground in the thickets and under the hedges in cool places, but I never saw it growing on a wall as the common ivy does. I don't think there is much of it anywhere hereabouts, but it grows in abundance in some places farther south. The American ladies always seem very much disappointed when I tell them 'Kenilworth ivy' doesn't grow here in Kenilworth, and I'm very sorry I can't give you some, ma'am."

"And the woman turned away, with a little sigh, as she thought of the hanging basket at home which was to have been filled with 'real Kenilworth ivy' and of the many friends to whom she had promised slips of the 'real thing' when it had grown. The ruins of Kenilworth castle are covered with thick masses of ivy, but it isn't 'Kenilworth ivy,' but just the common kind."—New York Sun.

The Aim of Christ's Work.

"Peace on earth" was the aim of Christ's work in this world, writes Edward Bellamy in The Ladies' Home Journal. The whole gist of his doctrine and the burden of his teaching consisted in counsels to men how to put an end to strife with their fellow men and live together with them in mutual helpfulness. All this teaching, which was the whole content of his gospel, was grouped about and crystallized in the golden rule, whereon our modern world is founded as on an everlasting foundation. To believe in Christ and not to believe in the golden rule as the only plan for social organization seems to us a moral and rational impossibility—an unthinkable proposition. Just this, however, our ancestors undertook to do, and it is fair to admit that they were very frank about it. They made no pretenses.

An Apt Reply.

Napoleon's apt replies often excited good humor in a crowd. A large and brawny fisherman once was haranguing the mob and telling them not to disperse. She finished by exclaiming: "Never mind those coxcombs with epaulettes on their shoulders. They care not if we poor people all starve if they can but feed well and grow fat."

Napoleon, who was as thin as a shadow, turned to her and said, "Look at me, my good woman, and tell me which of us two is the fatter."

The fish hag was completely disconcerted, and the mob dispersed.—Exchange.

BIG WARS CAUSED BY TRIFLES.

A Shaven Chin Cost France Three Million Lives—Modena's Bucket.

Many times it has happened that a great and costly war has been brought about by an incident trivial and even ridiculous.

Thus the war of the Spanish succession is said to have been caused through a glass of water. A lady, Mrs. Masham, was carrying a glass of water when she was obstructed by the Marquis de Torey. A slight scuffle ensued, and the water was spilled.

The marquis thereat took offense, and bad feeling ensued between the English and French courts, with the ultimate result that a war was declared.

The campaign cost France many severe battles—viz, Blenheim, 1704; Ramillies, 1707; Audenarde, 1708, and Malplaquet, 1709.

Quite as absurd in its origin was the war that took place during the commonwealth of Modena.

A soldier stole a bucket from a public well belonging to the state of Bologna. Although the value of the article did not exceed a quarter, its annexation was the signal for a fierce and prolonged war.

Henry, the king of Sardinia, assisted the Modenses to retain the bucket, and in one of the subsequent battles he was made a prisoner. The bucket is still exhibited in the tower of the cathedral of Modena.

A third instance of a war resulting from a trifling cause was that between Louis VII of France and Henry II of England.

The archbishop of Rouen decreed that no one should wear long hair upon their heads or chins. Louis submitted to the decree, whereupon his wife, Eleanor, rallied him upon his appearance. A quarrel ensued, which resulted in the dissolution of the marriage and Eleanor's marriage with Henry.

By this marriage the broad domains in Normandy formerly belonging to Louis passed into the possession of Henry. Louis, hotly incensed, made an attack on Normandy, and henceforth, for nearly 800 years, arose those bloody and devastating wars which cost France upward of 8,000,000 of lives.—London Answers.
