The Recorder of Line.

A member of the chamber of depu ties, much given to long speeches, one day found another deputy conversing in the lobby with a man whose face seemed familiar to him, but whom he could not remember. He fancied the man must be an intruding journalist. "Pardon me," he said to the other man, .. but whom have we here?" "Allow me to introduce to you," answered the deputy, "the man who that indictments had been found has written more falsehoods and against men of that family as early as stupidity than any other man living." "Indeed!" said the great man; "then my suspicion was correct that he is a road near the gap, in Lancaster counjournalist?" "Not at all; he is the official stenographer of the chamber."

OUTLAWS A CENTURY AGO. Greene's Banditti Still a Terror in

Mountains of Pennsylvania. In 1856 the district attorney of Laneaster county was trying a man named Greene for burglary, and he stated that the prisoner belonged to a family that had been criminals and lawbreakers since the revolution, and that the records of the courts of both Chester and Lancaster counties show against men of that family as early as 1679. In 1790 the Pennsylvania Gazette warned travelers on the state ty, that they were liable to be attacked by "Greene's banditti," said Greene being a giant negro of the most desperate character. A few years after he and his party attacked some Pittsburg wagoners and Greene was shot. Lancaster papers of a recent date announce the capture of Sam Greene, one of the most desperate of the Welsh mountain outlaws, who is wanted on numerous charges of robbery, and who has eluded arrest

Here is a striking instance of the vitality of crime. For five generations the Greenes have been persistent outlaws, living in a wealthy and thicklysettled community. The women and men are described by the Philadelphia erful and comely in appearance. Something is due to their surroundings. The mountain borders on the Pequea, the most fertile valley in the state, and the farmers are Mennonites, Mr. N. P.—There shall be neither who are opposed to applying to the courts for redress. Perhaps with more vigorous neighbors these outlaws would have been driven away. A woman wrote in favor of her hus. The family has not increased in numbecause he had a sister who was independence. In 1860 there were the jails of Lancaster and Lebanon. With one exception, none of them has ever been convicted of willful murder. In 1828 a pedlar named Alburty disappeared in the vicinity of the Welsh mountain, and a long time after a pile of bleached bones found in a ravine was identified as his remains. A round hole in the skull indicated how he lost his life. Jim Greene was arrested but the evidence was not sufficient to convict and he was released. About 1830 a man named Scott drove cattle over the pike, mostly from Virginia. He was a powerful man and resolute in character. He had sold his cattle in Philadelphia, and was returning to his home in Dauphin county, and was halted by a man just at nightfall near New Holland. He drew his heavy holster pistol and pulled the trigger. It snapped. He then struck the robber with the batt. breaking the stock and laying the man out on the pike. Scott then rode on. The robber was Rube Green, Jim's brother. His skull was fractured, and he died and was buried on the mountain before the officers could

You have all noticed the growing tendency of the last-of-the-century youth to be familiar in his linguistic intercourse with the young ladies of his acquaintance. One phase of the callow idiocy is the breezy salutation, regardless of surroundings, which members of the genus imagine savors of something like intellectual brilliancy. Sometimes, fortunately, a sensible girl is made the target of such mental shafts and she returns them to the sender with good An instance of this occurred in a vellow cable car during the rain Tuesday. There was a demure little brown-eved maiden sitting snuggled up in one corner and I stained a blue silk dress with all the other seats were occupied. when a mackintoshed and goloshed representative of the gilded youth color? One morning a banker stepped into his office and most effusively greeted service just twenty-five years before, and at the same time handed him a closed envelope, with the remark: "This is to serve you as a memento of the present occasion." The grateful recipient did not venture at first to open the envelope, until encouraged to do so by a nod and smile from his employer. And what do you think it contained? The banker's photograph that and nothing more. The bookkeeper was dumb. "What do you think of it?" his principal inquired. "It is just like you." was the reply .-Youth's Companion.

A | olling Steamer.

A little steamer of 100 tons is at present, according to press dispatches, being constructed at Argenteuil according to the invention of M. Bazen, which consists in rolling the ship over the water instead of foreing it through as at present. To this end a number of enormous copper cylinders are fixed to the vessel, the speed attained depending on the speed of the metal cylinders, and it is computed that thirty-one knots an hour can be easily made.

Just several shades removed from the chameleon fad is the idea of wearing snakeskins for neckties, but the fashion is growing in Baltimore. In one week from the time I took the first dose I began to feel like a new man. I kept on using it for some time and I am entirely cured. I have no symptoms of chronic catarrh whatever.
