THE CHEAPEST GOODS you can buy. THE LOWEST PRICES you can get, are not all that is necessary in purchasing Boots and Shoes.

Many of you have tried the above plan and it has not always given you the satisfaction you desired. You may have spent more than the difference that it would have cost for a better quality of goods at a little higher price in repairs made not once but many times until you threw them aside in disgust. Don't allow yourself to be fooled ALL THE TIME. We take pleasure in dealing in SATISFACTION as well as in BOOTS and SHOES, and the complaints we have are few and far between, and are instantly made satisfactory to you when made. Will you not try us this year and save a portion of your shoe bill by dealing with us? We await your decision.

Talk about heirlooms! Andy Berg, when he was in Norway a few years ago, picked up an old Danish cent that was milled in 1588. The cent was found under his father's blacksmith shop, and had been buried there for how many years no one knows. He has a fine collection of ancient money, embracing pieces of 1588, 1771, 1802. The 1588 piece had probably laid buried in the ground for 300 years. He also has a book that was printed—and still bears the mark of the printer—in 1610, at Copenhagen, and written in Norwegian. The book is 285 years old and fairly well preserved. The art of binding and printing is in excellent shape, and done as well as such work is at the present time.

The Beatrice Daily Express of April 11th says: "The entertainment at the Christian church last night was a decided success. Miss Prutzman was surely master of the situation in every respect. All enjoyed her descriptions and her power of impersonation was a feature of the evening that was pleasing to all. It was decidedly the best elocutionary entertainment given in the city for some time. It was superior, says one of the Chautauqua directors to those so highly enjoyed at the Chautauqua last summer." Miss Prutzman will be at the Congregational church Thursday evening, May 9.

Verily, the way of the new bicyclist is hard. Everything should clear the road as, when a person mounts a wheel for the first time and tries to cut the grapevine, something's got to drop. That was the way with Harry Stroup the other day when he collided with the Gardner House and expected it to drop, but it didn't; Harry did, though, and pretty hard, too. But the best joke was when our sheriff undertook to follow the hack line, which he did, too, and he found the hack at the end of the line, too; but he wasn't going to stop for anything like that. He kept right on going, and went all over that hack—and himself, too. Say, but what a picnic. Phew!

A. GALUSHA, Recorder.

On last Saturday the streets of Red Cloud were blockaded with teams, and they were hitched to the walks along Webster street so thick that there was hardly room to turn around. This very bad habit caused a little excitement on said day and came very near making a clean sweep in front of this office. The oil wagon came gliding down the street and hove to right in the midst of these teams. This same oil wagon had a large white umbrella attached to its top-mast, which spread several feet of canvas, and one gay horse seemed to have some objections to standing so close to that object, and, in trying to steer clear, crowded another team, and that team crowded another team, and then people began to crowd and holler. Taking it all together, they had a high old time. Finally, when about fourteen hundred people had grabbed about that many teams, and the excitement had subsided somewhat, Bill Lane's lumber wagon was found to have been overturned, one buggy had both shafts broken off, the sidewalk was badly shaken and the street was terribly trampled upon, otherwise, no damage was done.
