Recognition Recognized.

Among the advertisements in a German paper appeared the following: 'The gentleman who found a purse with money in the Blumenstrasse is requested to forward it to the address of the loser, as he is recognized.' A few days afterwards the reply was inserted: 'The recognized gentleman who picked up a purse in the Blumenstrasse requests the loser to call at his house.'

A Harmonizing Difference. Cannot you teach those about you to write somewhat more purely? I am very fastidious. Three days ago I was obliged to correct a friend of mine, a man as of fashion, who so far forgot the graces to say of a lady: 'I have not often been in her company.' Say 'presence,' we are in the company of men, in the presence of angels and of women.—Lander.

MARQUIS OF QUEENSBERRY.

Author of English Rules and Prosecution of Oscar Wilde.

The prominence given the Marquis of Queensberry in the Oscar Wilde case will be interesting in the sporting world. He is one of the characters of Great Britain known among pugilists as the author of the Marquis of Queensberry rules, his name is familiar to all ring followers. These rules were in vogue in the days when Tom Allen, Joe Goss and Jim Mace wore the great English fighters. John L. Sullivan was the first to make them popular in America. Few people know that, among other titles to fame possessed by the pugnares Marquis of Queensberry, is that of being a poet, and one, too, of no mean order. He published a volume of really good poems in 1880 and perhaps the best one of all is that entitled "The Spirit of the Matchlock," the beginning and conclusion of which contain lines of singular merit, delicacy and spirit. Lord Queensberry was likewise formerly on the turf and his racing colors were green, with salmon sleeves. Perhaps the best-known episode of his career was his interruption of Tennyson's successful play, "The Promise of May," at the Globe theater. The villain of the piece is an agnostic and throughout the drama is held up to ridicule and obloquy. Lord Queensberry, who was at the time an enthusiastic, resented this insult to what he considered to be his creed and accordingly on the fourth night of the performance rose from his seat in the orchestra stalls and exclaimed in a loud tone:

"I am an agnostic and I strongly protest against Mr. Tennyson's gross caricature of our creed."

Great excitement ensued among the audience which continued until the marquis had left the house, escorted by a policeman.

A "HOODOOD" TRAIN.

New York Central Men Railroad Shy of It—Sure to Meet with Some Bad Luck.

There is not a railway man on the New York Central who runs on freight trains that does not believe that the through freight known as A. S. No. 1, is a "hoodooed" train. The train runs from Albany to Suspension Bridge, and in the past few years has met with many accidents. Saturday morning the "hoodooed" train left Syracuse on time. Charles Detsel, a brakeman, who has been running on the road for the past five years, was assigned to make the run as forward brakeman. Detsel did not wish to take the run, saying to his companions that the train was "hoodooed," and that he believed he would meet with some bad luck. Everything went right until the train reached Cole's bridge, between Lock Berlin and Lyons. A brakeman on a westbound local that followed saw Detsel lying in the ditch on one side of the track, and the train was stopped and the injured man taken to Lyons. The entire scalp was torn off his head and he is in a dying condition. It was this train upon which Conductor Gowen was killed at Adams Basin Wednesday of last week. His death was caused in a similar manner. Conductor Orr met his death last summer on this train, and it is a fact that the "hoodooed" train met with five accidents on five consecutive days about a year ago.

The Record of a Frenchman Who Just Died in His Seventy-Third Year.

The Paris newspapers tell of a peculiar old man who died at Vienna early in March in his 73d year. They call him the most exact man of whom there is record. From his 17th year he kept accurate account of all he bought and what he paid for it. A few days before his death he made up his books to show just what eating, drinking and wearing clothes had cost him during his last fifty-six years. The total shows that in this period he wore out eight pairs of trousers and seventy-four coats and vests, for which he paid $8,000. He had bought 208 shirts and 306 collars, valued at $300. His omnibus fare was $208. In the twenty-seven years of his convivial life he consumed 28,786 glasses of beer. He gave up drinking in his 54th year, but he continued to smoke constantly even during his last sickness, raising the number of his cigars to 628,713 at an average of 11,217 a year. Of the whole number some 43,500 were given him; he bought the rest for $12,500, or 2 cents each. The exact old man took most pride in his socks, which were of the best silk and most expensive make, costing usually $1.50 a pair. He wore out but sixty-two pairs between his twenty-seventh and seventy-third years, or hardly more than a pair a year.

Political Conditions of American Women.

The women of Wyoming have full suffrage and municipal suffrage is granted women in Kansas. In twenty-eight more states they have a right to vote upon school matters, and there are at least twenty-nine out of a total of forty-eight states where women enjoy some form of suffrage. The political conditions of American woman today may be briefly summed up thus: While she is not yet admitted to the full exercise of political rights except in Wyoming, she possesses very generally some right to vote on local matters and to hold many executive offices; she in all walks of life is considered nearly, if not entirely, the equal of man, and in many cases his superior. She is on a par with him in respect to freedom of labor and earn money; she may vote, hold office, do business, enter upon any profession as the social equal of man, enjoying respectful consideration and is a good wife and housekeeper, and a most devoted mother, in spite of all her outside avocations.

NOVEL FLOATING CANNERY.

Schooner Gracie T. to Go South After Turtle and Guavas.

The two-masted American schooner Gracie T. finished fitting out at an East River pier the other night for a unique passage in southern waters. She will practically be a floating cannery. She sailed for Port Royal, Jamaica, and thereafter, until the fall, she may be seen in West Indian, Floridian, and Gulf ports. Until a few weeks ago she was owned by James Treagarten & Son, Benjamin Wood, with several speculative friends, bought her and had her prepared for the commercial expedition which, its promoters hope, will yield a big percentage of profits. Says a New York special: The Gracie T. carried six canners and a chef, besides her skipper, Captain Wilbur, and a crew of several men. She has aboard 150,000 empty cans, which will, it is expected, be filled with turtle, pompono, guava jelly and fish and game and fruit of many kinds before she returns to this port in the fall. The turtles will be caught in the West Indies and off the Florida coast. Some may be acquired by exchanging for them cheap manufactured articles, which form part of the schooner's cargo. The meats will be boiled down in three copper cauldrons. Then they will be canned and lowered into the process kettle in steel crates, and subjected to a high-temperature boiling under steam pressure to make them keep. The chef will superintend the preparation of the meats and the fish, and will make guavas into jelly after the most approved recipe. There is a duty on jelly, but not on guavas, but by manufacturing the jelly aboard an American vessel the projectors of the sea-going cannery expect to be able to escape the duty and to sell the jelly cheaper than it is sold now in America. Much of the canned goods will be brought back on the schooner, some will be landed and sent by steamship or railroad to the North from the Southern ports at which the schooner will touch.

TIPS TO SERVANTS.

They Absorb an Enormous Amount Annually in England.

A Paris Journal, discoursing of tips to servants in private houses both in England and on the continent, says that it is difficult for one to form an idea of the enormous sums in the way of gratuities absorbed by domestics employed in the homes of the English aristocracy. It gives the amount realized annually by the butler of a rich resident of Grosvenor square, London. This individual receives in tips from visitors the sum of £1,000, or $5,000 in addition to his regular pay. The Prince of Wales, who is naturally a heavy sufferer from exactions of this kind, has undertaken, so far as Sandringham house is concerned, to abolish the custom. He has given orders, according to the French Journal, that any servant who accepts a gratuity from a visitor shall be promptly dismissed. The Duchesses of Rutland and Portland have decided to pursue a similar course. This habit of tipping servants employed in private houses has, of course, been largely imitated and is used in this country. In the matter of a visit to a private house or a stay at a hotel, in the way of the figuratively extended palms, there is little to choose. Labouchere, who has written on this subject in Truth, is of the opinion that it is more economical to stop at the most expensive hotel than to accept hospitality at an English country or town house. He refers not only to the gratuities expected by the servants, but to other exactions which are extremely irksome and costly. It would save trouble and annoyance if a hotel should in addition to its regular charges, insert in the bill a stated amount for tips to be distributed pro rata by the proprietor.

HIGH-AIR GYMNASTICS.

An Aerial Performance Nearly 3,000 Feet Above Ground.

The greatest height at which an acrobatic performance ever took place was nearly 3,000 feet. An American aeronaut, Prof. Bartholomew, in 1889 at Melbourne, having ascended by a balloon to a height of 3,000 feet, made his ascent in a trapeze attached to a parachute, and during the descent performed a number of acrobatic and gymnastic feats. A cyclist, some time since, ascended at Charleroi, France, by a balloon in charge of Capt. Dennis, to which was suspended his bicycle. He worked the wheels of the machine as though he were riding along a road instead of being suspended at a height of about 1,500 feet. M. Blondin gave an acrobatic performance at the crystal palace, London, in 1862, on a rope 249 yards long, and 172 feet from the ground. On June 20, 1859, he crossed the Falls of Niagara on a tight rope in five minutes; on the Fourth of July following he repeated the performance blindfold, trundling a wheelbarrow, and on Aug. 19 of the same year he carried a man on his back. On Sept. 14, 1869, he crossed on stilts in the presence of the Prince of Wales. His feats on the tight rope were extraordinary—he walked across enveloped in a sack made of blankets, turned somersaults and cooked dinner.

Facts About Gas.

A cubic foot of good gas, from a jet one thirty-third of an inch in diameter and a flame of four inches, will burn 65 minutes. Internal lights require four cubic feet, per hour. Large or Argand burners will require from six to ten feet. In distilling 56 pounds of coal, the volume of gas produced in cubic feet, when the distillation was effected in three hours, was 41.3; in seven hours, 37.3; in twenty hours, 33.5; in twenty-five hours, 31.7. A retort produces about 600 cubic feet of gas in five hours, with a charge of about one and a half cwt. of coal, or 2,800 cubic feet in twenty-four hours.
