All washing is not white washing, as all soap is not Santa Claus. That bath-brick tint when seen in clothes, always proves that they are strangers to Santa Claus Soap.

Weather Bulletin.

(Copyrighted, 1895, by W. T. Foster.)

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., June 29.—My last bulletin gave forecast of the storm waves to cross the continent from 30th to July 4th. The next will reach the Pacific coast about July 5th, cross the western mountain country by close of 6th, the great central valleys from July 7th to 9th and the eastern states about the 10th.

the same may occur as to temperatures.

There is no means of knowing the future of the weather except by the records of past weather, and as these records are often very deficient our weather rules cannot always be perfect.

I have just completed my third calculation for July and the following are the results:

East of the Alleghanies and north of Washington City the temperature will be about and the rainfall about normal.

The Ohio Valley, Tennessee and the lower lakes will average much cooler than usual and the rainfall will be above the average.

The southeastern states will have average temperature and a drouth.

The southwest—including Texas, western Louisiana and Oklahoma—will have average temperature and rain.

The upper Mississippi valley and upper lakes, including the country north, northeast and northwest of St. Louis, will average cooler and therein a deficiency of rain will occur.

In the Missouri and the Red River of the North valleys, temperature will average below and rainfall about normal.

On the north Pacific slope temperature will be about and rainfall below normal.

On the south Pacific slope temperature will be above and rain below normal.

In the west of Rockies country temperature and rainfall will be about normal.

Within the districts mentioned above the rainfall will vary in smaller districts and I have only tried to give the general averages.

On the north Pacific slope temperature will be about and rainfall below normal.

On the south Pacific slope temperature will be above and rain below normal.

In the west of Rockies country temperature and rainfall will be about normal.

the Ohio, Tennessee, Upper Mississippi and Missouri and the lake country. From the crest of the Rockies westward the winter will taper off to milder in the direction of Vancouver's island, February showing the greatest departure on the cold side.

Besides these general features many extremes will occur that I can not undertake to give in this bulletin. As to the condition of winter grains much depends on the amount of snow and the weather in September, October and November of this year, and I will give in these bulletins, in time for practical results, my calculations as to the sowing of fall grain.
