Europe and McKinley.

(From the Vienna Tagblatt, May 9.)

The presidential election in the United States of North America, which is to occur next November, casts its shadows before.

The republican party has declared for McKinley, and there is almost a dead certainty that the creator of the bill named after him will be the next inhabitant of the White House.

The mere name of McKinley, in itself, when announced as a possible presidential candidate, is calculated to arouse the greatest apprehension all over Europe.

McKinley was sent to congress as the projector and champion of the high protective tariff idea, and by his untiring efforts and constant agitation he succeeded in 1890 in passing the bill which, when it became a law, had a most fatal effect upon the export industries of Europe.

Proceeding from the idea that the protection of home industries must correspond to the amount of income from duties and that without this revenue would reach an enormous amount and accumulate an unnecessary surplus, he sought by means of the bill to make the import of certain articles an absolute impossibility and close the ports of the nation to industrial product, the manufacture of which, according to his conception, did not exist in the United States because of an insufficient protective duty.

The working of the bill was not ineffectual, and even in Austria, which had a comparatively small per cent of the whole import, the suffering was severe. For the mother-of-pearl industries it became an absolute impossibility to continue business with the United States, which had hitherto been its chief customer. Many large establishments failed, and thousands of laborers in Vienna were obliged to hunger.

The impression received here by the bill was of such a kind as to arouse the liveliest inclination for the establishment of an international union to regulate duties.

Because of the heterogeneous mixture of interests, and especially the fact that England was not inclined to use any repressive measures, the ment was without result.

The European exporters suffered even more under the uncertainty under which they labored than from the tariff itself.

The bill remained in full force but a short time, and that not without the liveliest opposition in various sections of the union.

With Cleveland the democrats came into power and tried their best to make something out of what had been created by McKinley. At present the chances for the republican party are very good, for all the great industries and those connected with them will undoubtedly stake everything to put McKinley at the helm. President Cleveland has recently tried to gain wide popularity for his party in a political way by bringing up through the Monroe doctrine the old idea of America for Americans. Election of McKinley as president would not only be a most radical expression of pan-Americanism, but would also in an industrial sense be a severe blow to all other countries, which this time may, however, be better prepared to receive it than formerly.

At that time the new industrial exchange between Europe and America was not settled, and therefore unusual hardships were the result of the bill. The countries of this continent were not united and could not co-operate on account of a great diversity of interest. This time the defenses will undoubtedly be easier, and not the smallest factor in the problem will be the declared political policy of Europe.

In the union itself stands a great party violently opposed to the radical opinions of McKinley. It will certainly be hard fight before the present governor of Ohio really becomes president and ready to carry out his projects of reform.

This fact, however, is no special ground for hope. The European states should at once go to work to prevent a great industrial crisis which would inevitably follow another blow from American sources.

The industrial balance of Austria is passive, but a further set back in our exports can only have the most disastrous results. It is to be hoped that the situation is clear to all. The time has entirely passed when we may afford to treat lightly our export trade. The name of the present republican candidate for president is known everywhere in Europe, where it causes the greatest disquiet. North America is constantly making herself more unpleasantly felt. Cleveland has done his worst in a political way, and now we are threatened more emphatically by the possibly presidency of McKinley. We therefore feel called upon to watch the progress of events in America with the greatest interest and attention. It is a world interest which will be touched by the presidential election, and we cannot afford to be indifferent as to whether the result will have a tendency for peace or for war.—Translated by Marie Schiller.

THE GREAT HUXLEY.

What Huxley, the Great English Scientist, Considered the Best Start in Life.

The great English scientist, Huxley said the best start in life is a sound stomach. Weak stomachs fail to digest food properly, because they lack the proper quantity of digestive acids (lactic and hydrochloric) and peptogenic products; the most sensible remedy in all cases of indigestion, is to take, after each meal, one or two of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, because they supply in a pleasant, harmless form all the elements that weak stomachs lack.

The regular use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will cure every form of stomach trouble except cancer of the stomach.

They increase flesh, insure pure blood, strong nerves, a bright eye and clear complexion, because all these result only from wholesome food well digested.

Nearly all druggists sell Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at 50 cents full sized package.

CARELESSNESS
 Often Causes No End of Suffering.

Probably half the people who see this article suffer from piles. It is one of the commonest diseases and one of the most obstinate. People have it for years and just because it is not immediately fatal they neglect it. Carelessness causes no end of suffering. Carelessness about so simple a thing as piles has often caused death. Hemorrhages occur from no apparent cause and loss of blood causes death. Hemorrhages occur during surgical treatment, often causing death.

Piles are simple in the beginning and easily cured. They can be cured even in the worst stages, without pain or loss of blood, quickly, surely and completely. There is only one remedy that will do it—Pyramid Pile Cure.

It allays the inflammation immediately, heals the irritated surface and with continued treatment reduces the swelling and puts the membranes into good, sound, healthy condition. The cure is thorough and permanent. Druggists sell the Pyramid Pile Cure at 50 cents. Send for Free book on cause and cure of Piles.
