WASHINGTON NOTES

One who has so well charted the true status of the political situation by comparing what is given out at the Bryan headquarters with what is given out at the McKinley headquarters is apt to think with the oft-deceived man who exclaimed "All men are liars!" It is a part of the game of politics to claim everything, in order to induce those who are on the fence to get down on your side. But the private utterances of the politicians are often directly opposite to what they say for publication, and as a rule they represent pretty nearly their real opinion. From their public talk, you would suppose that the gold men and the silver men are equally confident, but their conversation in private tells a different story. The past week has made heavy inroads upon the stock of confidence at Bryan headquarters, and has largely increased that article at McKinley headquarters. It has become plain to the most enthusiastic silverite that Bryan need expect nothing from the east, and the Indiana ticket may throw some of the southern states for McKinley. Bryan's managers are also being hampered by a lack of money to carry on the campaign which they have inspired, while the McKinley managers are flooding the doubtful states with literature and filling them with speakers. And to add to the woes of the critics, the complaints against the way in which the Bryan managers are running things, are increasing.

Senator Butler, chairman of the Illinois national committee, will not talk about the conference he had with John Watson several days ago. In fact he fails to say that Watson is a fool, and that he thinks the next step would be greatly hastened by withdrawal of Seward. Mr. Shaw has added to the difficulties of the situation by his positive statement that he doesn't intend to withdraw, which is thought to be intended as a hard blow at those who were scheming to get him off the ticket.

While everybody wishes to see the post office of the country brought to the highest possible efficiency, there are others who believe that making the employees spies upon each other will help things along in that direction; however, among the few who do believe in the spy system are some post office department officials, who have caused a general strike to the railway and service clerks, calling their attention to the general order issued last winter, requiring employees to report cases of irregularity and misconduct of any employee which come to their knowledge to the clerks of division and to forward to Washington, and warning them of punishment to come if they do not obey those orders. Remembering the stories with which school children treated the "yellow dog" of the school, and that men are but grown-up school children, it is not surprising that this order has been quietly ignored in the past, nor will it be surprising if it continues to be ignored, notwithstanding these threats.

While I do not assert that he will do so, nobody need be surprised if Secretary Cupples should go to Kentucky and take the stand for Palmer and Hickman. It is a known fact that he feels very sore over the things which Bryan and other stump speakers have made of his management of the treasury and that he would like to see Kentucky carried for McKinley, and that he would do it if he believed it possible to do so. His budget totals $10,000,000 more than McKinley. If they could get hundred thousand McKinleys, he would be able to carry the state. Secretary Teller has a strong personal following in Kentucky, and the Bryan managers would dislike very much to see him make the stump in that state. The two states in which the Indianapolis ticket is expected to get votes enough to be a factor in the result are Kentucky, Indiana and Indiana. In many of the other states Bryan and McKinley and Bryan are equal candidates.

Senator Hill is being very carefully watched by both silver democrats and gold democrats. Both sides are inferring that he will shortly come out for their ticket, but it is easy to see that neither side knows just where Hill stands. His actions and words at the Chicago convention would seem to make it very easy for him to come out against Bryan and for the Indiana ticket. On the other hand, many believe that when he entertained Mr. Bryan at his New York home he made a bargain to come out for Bryan at the coming democratic state convention. It is altogether probable that Senator Hill, who is nothing if not a shrewd politician, will be largely governed by the local conditions in New York in choosing the position he will occupy, although there are reports which say that the local conditions, manipulated by Hill's democratic opponents, are forcing him into a position willy nilly.
