WORK THAT GOES AWRY.

some Things that Disturb the Household Happiness.

Every housekeeper knows that it is not the steady routine work which goes on day after day, with variations of incidental company and incidental extra work of various kinds, that breaks down the health and temper. In the harmonious home, and there are thousands of such happy homes throughout the land, each member of the family contributes a share of work to the complete whole.

The things that exhaust the patience and leave a powerful impress finally, like drops of water on the hard rock, wearing out nervous strength and patience, are the unexpected. There seems to be certain individuals so constituted that they can not conform to the routine ways of any home. They invariably tangle up the work by going on in an individual way of their own, regardless of the convenience of all other members of the household. The hour for breakfast may be settled for all the rest, but not for them. In all sorts of unexpected ways they manage to interfere with the routine of things, and actually make double work for everyone else

There are some housekeepers who have no idea of system, who are hard. drudging workers, forever cleaning and grubbing over floors and pantries that ought to be kept clean. Bustle and noise are not parts of a good house-keeper's work. The wheels of motion in a well-kept house move so noislessly that no one is aware that there is a system in all that goes on, unless it be by the sense of quiet and peace prevailing over everything. It is just this quiet atmosphere which the undisciplined person fails to undisciplined person fails to appreciate. Yet there can be no without serious breaks in comfort where there is no thorough system. disguised though it may be: and the ignorant person wonders why everything seems to be in perfect order without any display of extraordinary work. The reason is that the work is all done at an appointed time, and an extra effort is made if there is to be extra work.

The lousekeeper who is systematic does not attempt to do more than she can. the refuses to do unnecessary work which she is sure can not be accomplished without hurry and confusion, and which will put back necessary work. It requires cool judgment to estimate this, and some independence to accomplish it. When every other woman in the village has joined a new society, it seems churlish to refuse to do so, yet the systematic housekeeper must sometimes refuse if it interferes with necessary work at home. In general it will be found that she does more for the church and for the other objects in the village because ber time is so arranged that she has more to spare.

The family sewing-basket is not al-lewed to get beyond her needle. The eld maxim, "A stitch in time saves nine," is carefully heeded, and the mending is lessened. The systematic woman keeps an account-book and knows to a penny what the expendi-tures are, and she does not go beyond them. She is not subject to untoward accidents, like the upsetting of lamps, the everturning of china, and those va-rious mishaps that try the patience, bethings. And because of this very care daughter's strategy negligent women. Nothing is so wearisome and so wear ing to the nervous system as the irritation arising from want of system and general haphazard methods of housekeeping. It is truth, not fletion, that indolent people always work the hardest. They never find what they are in search of. They make all manner of work which of necessity they are compeled to take care of .- N. Y Tribune.

HACKED OUT AT THE ALTAR. flow a Young Englishwoman Thwarted

Her Father's Matrimontal Plans. If all the young women were like Miss Amy Lambert it would be a training to parents in the way they should Mr. Lambert, the father of Miss Amy, was a signaler in the government telegraph office at Allahabad, India. Probably he had been influenced by what he saw of life in India. At any rate, he regarded his daughter much as he did the telegraph instruments in his office. With those he pressed a button and it recorded whatever he wanted it to. He expected Miss Amy to do the same. Finally Mr. Passana, a dusky gentle-man in the employ of a native prince, net the daughter of the signaler, and the pleased him She was so eminently satisfactory to his fancy that he forthwith announced to her father that he wished to marry her.

The telegraph operator the ight it over. Court gentlemen, even if rather swarthy ones, were not to be had every day, and it behooved the father of a family of daughters to allow possible wooers to come early and often. So he announced to Miss Amy that her future was arranged for and to prepare for the wedding on such and such s day. When the astonished young woman recovered from her suprise she assured her father that she liked not the rajah's brunette courtier, and that to the best of her knowledge the wedding would not come off. Her father pooh-poohed this outburst, told her to draw on him for all she needed for a suitable trouseeau, and took himself off to drink with his future son-in-law.

Then it was that Miss Amy Lambert made up her mind as to a course of action. During the succeeding weeks, although she repeatedly and decisively told her father that she could not and would not be happy with Mr. Passana, she nevertheless, finding that no heed was paid to her remonstrances, joined with interest in the preparations for the wedding. At last the day of the ceremony arrived. Miss Amy Lambert, dressed in a beautiful new grown, and with a pleasant consciousness that she had more new clothes at home than she had ever dreamed of possessing all at once, rode to the church in company with her father, who, beholding her placid and satisfied face, told himself what a wise father he had been.

"All one needs," said the telegraph operator to himself, "is a little firmness. Silly girls should never be allowed to have their own way in these matters."

And all the time the bride-elect smiled softly to herself, as if her thoughts were peculiarly pleasant. The clergyman, Rev. Brook Deedes, thought he had never seen a happierlooking couple and began the ceremony with the warm expectation of a goodly fee. He bowled merrily along until he reached the question: "Will you have this man to be your wedded husband?" He expected a faint "I will," but was almost paralyzed to receive an emphatic negative from the young woman, who at the same time handed him a document setting forth some of her objections.

Of course the wedding did not come off. The guests dispersed in various directions, some of them going to condole with the determined young wom-an's father, who was expected to be cause she is careful. The whole secret of much downcast. Strange to say, how-her system lies in her care of little over, he was so delighted with his hilarious over the affair and did not even begrudge her the fine new wardrobe she had acquired. What became of the bridegroom history (in the shape of the Allahabad News) does not record, but after this he will probably not attempt to marry an English girl against

Examining this patch curiously, they saw a bit of hide only partially covered at one end, and on digging they ered at one end, and on digging they found the body of a well-grown grizzly cub. Its skull had been crushed and the brains licked out, and there were

The hunters pondered long over this strange discovery, and hazarded many guesses as to its meaning. At last they decided that probably the cub had been killed and its brains eaten, either by some old grizzly or by a cougar; that the mother had returned and driven away the murderer, and that she had then buried the body and lain

Scaling Wax Still Used in France.

In France sealing wax has by no means gone out of use as a conse quence of the introduction of gumme envelopes. There is even a sort of code or language of scaling wax among fashionable people. White scaling wax is chosen for communications relating to weddings, black for obituaries, violet for expressions of sympathy, chocolate for invitations to dinner, red for business, ruby for en-gaged lovers' letters, green for letters from lovers who live in hopes, and brown for refusals of offers of marriage, while blue denotes constancy, yellow jealousy, pale green reproaches and pink is used by young girls and gray between friends.
