An ingenious woman of North Topeka, who is haunted by a fear that her clothing may sometimes catch fire, has invented a device whereby she hopes to secure protection. By the mere pulling of a string every fastening in her garments is released and they fall from her. Here is a straight tip from a newspaper called Brains: "There is only one right way to advertise, and that is to hammer your name, your location, your business so constantly, so persistently, so thoroughly into the people's heads that if they walk in their sleep they will constantly turn their steps toward your store. The newspaper is your friend in spite of your criticism. It helps to build up the community that supports you. When the day comes that the newspapers are dead the people are on the edge of the grave with nobody to write the epitaph."

Don't use bill heads or statements in which you have to write your own name. Get them printed in an up-to-date style. There is nothing which will make your customers think you are of the disposition to be penurious so much as this. If you are stingy in one way what reason is there to believe that you won't be in other ways. Get your printing done right at the CHIEF office.
If there is one thing that tries the human soul, it is that of getting out of bed on a cold morning to light the fire. How blamed cold the house seems! Your breath looks like steam from a locomotive, and your duds get tangled up so that it takes an hour to get them on, and when they are on they feel as though they had been on ice all night. And if there is anything colder than a cold stove on a cold morning, we want to know what it is. The kindling won't burn and the coal smolders drearily, and you stand and shiver and shiver, and it's about noon before you get a good enough fire to boil water. Some people sleep in warm rooms, and it is no trial to get up and make a fire, but such people are few of days and full of diseases.—Beatrice Express.

Editor Brann of the Iconoclast at Waco, Texas, has been stirring things up in that place recently. He is certainly a genius in his line even if he does use phrases which do not look nice in print. There are those in Red Cloud whom Editor Brann could paint a pen picture in glowing colors and not lack for material.

The editor of the Clay Center Times, though a bachelor, has made this discovery: A man is harder than a woman except in the hands. When she sees him take his coat tail to hold a stove lid lifter, she pushes him away in disgust and takes the hot object in her hand without wincing. If he should do that he would drop it at once, and couldn't help it. When he has a dish to lift from the stove he very properly starts off to hunt up a cloth, and while he is gone she removes it with her naked hand, and is there ready to say things that make him feel small and worthless when he gets back.

General Debility and Loss of Flesh

Scott's Emulsion has been the standard remedy for nearly a quarter of a century. Physicians readily admit that they obtain results from it that they cannot get from any other flesh-forming food. There are many other preparations on the market that pretend to do what does, but they fail to perform it. The pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil made into a delightful cream, skillfully blended with the Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda, which are such valuable tonic, makes this preparation an ideal one and checks the wasting tendency, and the patient almost immediately commences to put on flesh and gain a strength which surprises them.

Wedding Bells.
On last Wednesday evening the 24th, at 7 o'clock, three and a half miles northeast of Coxies, the hand of Miss Minnie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Spracher, was given in marriage to Mr. Arthur H. Colburn, the Rev. James Mark Darby of this city officiating. A few relatives and friends witnessed the beautiful and impressive ceremony.
Miss Susie Spracher acted as first bridesmaid and Mr. Clair Colburn as first groomsmen; Miss Mable Wells as second bridesmaid and Mr. Lee Spracher second groomsmen.
The bride and groom stood under an evergreen arch inter-twined with white flowers.
The ceremony and congratulations being over the guests were invited by Mrs. Spracher out to a delightful repast to which all did ample justice.
The bride was attired in white silk and the groom in the usual black.
Many beautiful and costly presents were received.
The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Spracher and has a host of friends.
The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Colburn who stands high in the community.
The young people start out with bright prospects before them. The CHIEF unites with their many friends in wishing them a safe and prosperous journey through life.

"Well, my son," said the editor of the Danville Breeze to his son, who wanted a wheel, "you'll find one in the front end of that wheelbarrow, and there is a big pile of coal ashes back of the house that will have to be moved. The handle bars are white ash and are adjustable, so you can get any style of hump on that suits your fancy. It is regulated largely by the load you put on. The bigger the load the more you have to hump yourself. Be careful and don't mar the enamel on the frame and keep the ball-bearings well oiled so they won't cut into the cones. The tire is absolutely punctureless, so you won't have to take a pump and repair kit with you. By the time you have removed that pile of ashes I think you will have made a century run—also the perspiration. You'd better come to dinner now.—St. Paul Dispatch.
