The State Journal of last Sunday speaking of the death of President McKinley says:

"The shock to the country yesterday morning caused by the announcement of the president's death was almost as violent as that produced by the news of the deadly assault upon him a week previous by a treacherous assassin. There was, however, some warning in this case. Twenty-four hours earlier, the public rejoicing at the marked improvement in the stricken man's condition, was rudely suspended by the news that his heart was seriously affected and that the physicians thought the chance for recovery was exceedingly small. "But if we can keep him alive one more night," they said, "he may rally from the relapse." It was not to be. As the darkness gathered over the earth the strength of the stalwart man of the people waned and before the dawn of another day he gave us his last message, "Good bye all. It is God's way. His will be done," and in a short time all was over. Infinitely pathetic was that scene, but it was infinitely inspiring. He died like a soldier, a statesman, and a christian, in the full possession of his faculties, in full command of his splendid courage, up to the moment of insensibility that preceded the end. From the instant that he felt the stroke of the assassin's bullets to the instant of departing consciousness, no complaint passed his lips. His thoughts were for others, not for himself. "Don't tell my wife" was his first utterance when he realized his dangerous condition. The next was as he cast his eyes toward the struggling group around the prostrate body of his slayer, "Let no one hurt him." The greatness of the president we have lost has been illustrated during the last week of his life in a way that will silence forever the carping of his critics and the senseless taunts and gibes of his foes. He was a man of whom the nation will always be proud. Brave, upright, genial, tender and wise, his fame will grow brighter with every decade, and history will write him down as one of the greatest citizens that the republic has produced, a character unique in its symmetry, splendid in its beauty, magnificent in its strength and stainless in its purity. Wherever we find him, the same. A student, struggling with poverty, private soldier, officer in the army of the union, lawyer, congressman, governor, president, husband, his stature leveled up four square to the height of his opportunity, the faith of his fellow men followed him without variableness or shadow of turning. Few men in history have been more universally and sincerely mourned than is William McKinley."

Bird-Shot For Tiger.

No use to hunt tigers with bird-shot. It doesn't hurt the tiger any and it's awfully risky for you.

Consumption is a tiger among diseases. It is stealthy—but once started it rapidly eats up the flesh and destroys the life. No use to go hunting it with ordinary food and medicine. That's only bird-shot. It still advances. Good heavy charges of Scott's Emulsion will stop the advance. The disease feels that.

Scott's Emulsion makes the body strong to resist. It soothes and toughens the lungs and sustains the strength until the disease wears itself out.
