SAFE FROM THE LAW

Places in London Where Thieves Are Secure from Arrest.

The Finding of a Criminal Amidst the Teeming Millions of People is a Tremendous Task for the Sharpest Sleuths.

One of the natural harbors or refuges for the criminal classes is the city of London. Indeed, all large cities offer a measure of security to lawbreakers, but the English metropolis being the most populous city in the world gives such characters exceptional opportunities for concealment, despite the fact that the metropolitan police force is the most efficient and successful in the world. The fact is that to find a hiding criminal in London (with its teeming millions of people of all nationalities) is a tremendous task, and in the case of alien criminals the magnitude of the task is doubled by the fact that the "descriptions" supplied to Scotland Yard by foreign police authorities are proverbially meager and unreliable when they are not absolutely idiotic.

Despite, however, the advantages London offers fugitives from justice, when a British criminal commits a big crime whereby he obtains the necessary funds he generally gives the "Axis of the Empire" a wide berth and endeavors to get somewhere abroad under a vague sort of impression that anywhere is safer than the country in which he committed his crime.

The question of whether he shall himself be one which he must find considerable difficulty in answering, and the difficulty is yearly being increased by the concluding of more and more extradition treaties, and the awakening of those countries with which the United States already has such treaties to a more proper sense of their obligations. Owing to the existence of scores of extradition treaties, almost every country is nominally as unsafe to fugitive criminals (excepting those "wanted" for political crimes) as the snug island, but nominally is not actually, for which difference the emigrating evildoer has every reason to be thankful.

More than half the treaties the government holds with foreign countries for the extradition of criminals who fly the country are practically dead letters. Were it not for this fact there would be only one actual refuge for fugitive lawbreakers, whereas there are dozens. The Bonin islands, in the Pacific ocean, and off the coast of Japan, constitute the sole remaining nominal refuge for the criminal classes, and this refuge is not favored by any but the lowest and most criminal.

Men who have committed crimes for which death, lifelong imprisonment, Siberia, or perhaps torture, would be due punishment, have flown to the Bonin islands from all parts of the world, and have set up a small colony of all that is most brutal in human nature, but the gentlemanly criminal, the bland fraud from the city who decamps with tens of thousands, prefers a less certain safety with an element of comfort, and would probably rather be arrested than be forced to patronize the Bonin islands, particularly as there is now every hope of this refuge being covered by an extradition treaty in the near future.

Argentina is still a happy hunting ground for criminals, and Jabez Balfour's capture was an exceptionally good stroke of luck for law and justice. There are scores upon scores of criminals safely retired in the Argentine Republic.

Giant Oak of Germany.

Naturalists in Germany are much interested in a wonderful old tree which has been discovered near Homburg. It is an oak, and is notable not only on account of its great bulk, but also for the fact that at the base of the trunk it is entirely hollow. The trunk, indeed, is not more than eight or nine feet high, but it is more than 25 feet in circumference. Some idea of the size of its interior may be gathered from the fact that four persons recently found ample room in it. In winter the old oak looks very bare and gaunt, but, according to peasants in the neighborhood, who have known it for many years, it regularly puts forth new twigs and foliage every spring, so that, ancient and decayed though its trunk may be, it is nevertheless crowned and surrounded with masses of green leaves, just as it was in the days of its youth. The people of Homburg are very proud of this natural curiosity, and it is safe to say that many tourists will have a look at it during the coming summer.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Rich Woman Peddles Milk.

New Jersey among its other freaks has a freak woman—a woman who, though wealthy, takes pleasure in peddling milk. She is Mrs. Anna Silliman, wife of C. P. Silliman, of Vineland, a woman of good social standing, education, refinement and beauty. Some time ago, wearying of society and the luxurious living of the wealthy, Mrs. Silliman decided to adopt the life of a milkmaid purely as a diversion. Every morning at four o'clock this society belle can be seen starting from her elegant country home in an outfit that is a veritable house on wheels. Unattended she drives from house to house and leaves the pint or quart of lacteal fluid as daintily as she receives her callers in evening dress. The townspeople, at first astonished, became so charmed with the innovation that her trade is increasing daily. Mr. and Mrs. Silliman are financially able to live in any style they may see fit and this fact makes the pretty milkmaid all the more conspicuous in her endeavor to outface faddism.—N. Y. Sun.

GASSING TREES FOR INSECTS.

New Method Employed in California Orange Orchards to Save the Trees.

The United States department of agriculture has just reported on a unique and effective method for killing the scale insects which are causing so much destruction to orange trees in California. The principal injury is the extraction of the juice of the tree. As the scale insect is a mere pumping machine, it is continually absorbing the sap from the tree. There is likewise a poisoning caused by the irritation excited by the beak of the insect, or some liquid injected through the same.

It has now been found that the only sure means of destroying these pests is by subjecting them to the fumes of hydrocyanic acid gas, commonly designated as "gassing." For most species of scaled insects one good gassing, when done at the right season, will almost, if not quite, exterminate them.

The treatment consists in inclosing a tree at night with a tent and fusing the latter with the poisonous fumes generated by treating refined potassium cyanide, 98 per cent. strength, with commercial sulphuric acid, 66 per cent., and water. The proportions of the chemicals as now employed in California are considerably in excess of the amounts recommended a few years since.

For small trees ordinary earthenware vessels are used to generate the gas. For larger ones, requiring heavy doses, tall wooden pails are employed, two generators being used. The extremely dangerous nature of the gas demands that the greatest caution should be taken to avoid inhaling it by an operator. The treatment is made at night, and the person handling the chemicals holds up the tent and quickly drops the cyanide into the generator and makes a prompt exit. The gassing is often done for cultivators by individuals who make a regular business of it, charging a fixed rate per tree, depending on size, ranging from ten cents to a dollar or more.

About 50 trees of the largest size, 30 feet high or thereabouts, can be treated in a night with an equipment of 12 or 15 tents. With smaller trees the number which can be treated in a single night is very considerable, it being possible to gas from 300 to 500 trees, averaging ten feet in height, in 11 or 12 hours, employing about 40 ring tents.

They Only Titter.

The Chinese laugh is not as hearty or as expressive as the European or American. It is oftener a titter than a genuine outburst of merriment. There is little character or force in it.—N. Y. Sun.
