

Poison Oak Poison Ivy

are among the best known of the many dangerous wild plants and shrubs. To touch or handle them quickly produces swelling and inflammation with intense itching and burning of the skin. The eruption soon disappears, the sufferer hopes forever; but almost as soon as the little blisters and pustules appeared the poison had reached the blood, and will break out at regular intervals and each time in a more aggravated form. This poison will linger in the system for years, and every atom of it must be forced out of the blood before you can expect a perfect, permanent cure.

SSS Nature's Antidote FOR Nature's Poisons, is the only cure for Poison Oak, Poison Ivy, and all noxious plants. It is composed exclusively of roots and herbs. Now is the time to get the poison out of your system, as delay makes your condition worse. Don't experiment longer with salves, washes and soaps—they never cure. Mr. A. M. Marshall, bookkeeper of the Atlanta (Ga.) Gas Light Co., was poisoned with Poison Oak. He took Sulphur, Arsenic and various other drugs, and applied externally numerous lotions and salves with no benefit. At times the swelling and inflammation was so severe he was almost blind. For eight years the poison would break out every season. His condition was much improved after taking one bottle of S. S. S., and a few bottles cleared his blood of the poison, and all evidences of the disease disappeared.

People are often poisoned without knowing when or how. Asymptomatic your case fully to our physicians, and they will cheerfully give such information and advice as you require, without charge, and we will send at the same time an interesting book on Blood and Skin Diseases.

FABLES.

From the Kansas Mail and Breeze.

A Nebraska merchant was much troubled with nibblers, that is, with persons who came into the store and helped themselves to apples, nuts, prunes, and some other things that are good to eat, as they found in rambling about the store. There was one man in particular who made the storekeeper weary with this sort of business and the merchant determined to lay for him. He carefully fixed up a few apples by dipping them in liquid nux vomica, and also dosed a hunk of bologna sausage of which the nibbler was fond with cayenne pepper until it was much warmer than a summer's day. He put the apples on the top of the basket, just where he knew the nibbler would get them and hung up the bologna where it would be handy for the nibbler to get it. Then the storekeeper smiled to himself as he thought of the way that nibbler would spit and cough when he got hold of the loaded bologna and the doctored apples. But it happened that the nibbler was out of town that day, and while the merchant was busy his wife came in to get some things for the evening meal and helped herself to the doctored apples and also to the bologna which had been loaded. And that evening the unsuspecting man who did not know what his wife had done, helped himself to a bit of bologna while his wife took an apple. For a few minutes both of them were busy, the man laying his jaws with ice water, while his wife was trying to get the taste out of her mouth, but when they had time to express themselves he declared that he supposed she would have sense enough to ask him about things when she came to the store, while she declared that she supposed any man in the town would have known better than to do a fool thing like that.

And the next day the nibbler came in as usual and helped himself to a couple of apples, a handful of mixed nuts, and a finger length of bologna, while the merchant never said a word.

Moral—The guilty often have a rattling good time while the innocent get it in the neck.

A dog which had a deep seated animosity toward cats in general, saw for the first time as he was strolling through a bit of woodland, a small spotted skunk. "There is a spotted cat," said the dog to himself as he made a dash for it, "if it doesn't get up a tree inside of a minute I will make it wish it had never been born."

But the mephitic didn't climb a tree, neither did it run as the inexperienced dog had expected.

It was an hour before the dog got over being sick at the stomach and for a week he wasn't allowed to go into the house. Sometime after this the dog in company with another canine was traveling some little distance from home when they saw a strange cat come," said the other dog, "but I suppose that cat is a tree." "You will have to excuse me, my friend," said the first dog, "I have quit chasing cats unless I know something about their pedigrees." Experience often breeds caution.

A boy whose father had tried to raise him right, fell in with a youth who wanted to be a sport. And the sport proposed to teach the good boy to play poker so that he could trot in his class.

The second lesson was in progress when he man who had tried to bring his boy up right got on and suddenly took a hand in the game. The first thing the man did was to "raise" the sport clear out of the game with a pair of those soled shoes. Then he "called" his own boy and as he turned the youth over his knee he demonstrated that he had a hand that could not be beat. The boy tried to shift to another game and proceeded to "hog." "All right, my son," said the old man as he knocked the dust out of the basement of the boy's pants, "I will give you one."

"Now, my son," said the old man as he turned the boy loose, "if you want any more pointers about these games inquire of your ancestor."

In a southern court a man was brought in and arraigned. "What is this man charged with?" asked the court as he looked at the culprit. "He is charged with killing a man in a row two weeks ago," answered the prosecuting attorney. "Turn him loose," said the court with an important gesture, "you should be careful, Mr. Prosecuting Attorney, about taking up the time of this court with trivial cases." "But, your honor," said the prosecuting attorney, "this man is also charged with having eaten with a nigger." "What!" yelled the court as he shook with ill suppressed indignation. "Do you mean to say that he allowed a nigger to eat at his table?" "Even so, your honor," "Handcuff and shackle him at once. It will never do for us to have the social fabric of the south endangered by any such crimes. Gentlemen of the jury you are instructed to find that man guilty without leavin' yo' seats."

An alecky young dog, seeing a bear chained to a post began to bark at the animal. It made the bear more or less warm under the collar, but as the chain was stout it couldn't get at the dog. The pup, seeing it wasn't getting hurt became more impudent and finally concluded that it could do what it pleased to that bear. Turning to some fellow dogs it said: "Just watch me now while I bite a chunk out of that bear." But as the pup rushed in to take a nip out of the rear quarter of the bear, the animal got action on the pup with a front paw. When a friend of the pup picked it up and laid it on a pile of straw where it could die easy, he said: "If that pup had followed the example of a lot of people who always stand away back and work their jaws, stating what they would do if they had the chance, he might have maintained a reputation for several years yet of being considerable of a dog."

Repairing Neatly Done

Never thought of such a sign for a medicine did you? Well, it's a good sign for Scott's Emulsion. The body is to be repaired like other things and Scott's Emulsion is the medicine that does it.

These poor bodies wear out in worry, from over-work, in disease. They get thin and weak. Some of the new ones are not well made—and some of the old ones are racked with long usage.

Scott's Emulsion fixes all these. It does the work both inside and out. It makes soft bones hard, thin blood red, weak lungs strong, hollow places full. Only the best materials are used in the patching and the patches don't show through the new glow of health.

No one has to wait his turn. You can do it yourself—you and the bottle.

This picture represents the Trade Mark of Scott's Emulsion and is on the wrapper of every bottle. Send for free sample.
