State Creek.

Old Mr. Grip has about let go of the people in this part and everything indicates spring. One can, in low places, see the grass starting.

Wheat, which has been talked of all winter as being injured by the mild, dry weather, is coming out all right. In some instances the green fields can be seen for a half mile, and in others it is just starting. A close examination shows that the drill furrow around the roots of the grain is moist.

Fruit is all right with the possible exception of the budded peach, though if the weather is favorable from now on there will bloom enough for all kinds of fruit.

Wm. Rosencrans and family have gone to Illinois to live—back to their former home near Rockford.

Lots of alfalfa will be sown this year. Even when the seed is scarce and high, the farmers sow a few acres more each year.

The fire at V. H. Scrivner's last week was a bad one. It burned up his old barn, cattle sheds and the new barn, which was only partly built, with the foundation, 50x60 feet, and destroyed nearly all of his alfalfa, millet and prairie hay, and a lot of corn. The men of the family were away from home and did not get back until the fire had done its work. A six-year-old grandson and a match were responsible for the fire. There was no insurance on any of the burned property.

We are very proud of our proposed rural mail line. The line will run south from Inavale, cross the state line into Kansas for two miles, east four miles, then north to the river near the mouth of this creek, thence west up the river bottom to the Inavale bridge. Then when we get our phone line from Lebanon to Red Cloud, and the Wozler line to intersect with that at Spence Potter's, we will lay back at home, talk to all our friends, and then go out to the mail box, get the papers and read the balance of the news.
