Elaine Roze's, Fashion Letter.

After years of travelling back and forth over "the briny" I have come to the conclusion that no more delightful trip can be taken than a short sea voyage to Nova Scotia, and one could travel for months through remote foreign lands without finding a hundredth part of the charm and beauty of this land of Longfellow's Evangeline.

Last Week, with a view to making a study of the travelling American woman, I took this trip, which is the latest fad of the fashionable woman, who realizes the importance of a complete rest as a beauty builder after an arduous social season.

It is the exceptional American woman who overdoes for travelling to day, so I happily say little to criticize in the way of unsuitable costuming, but rather much to admire in the trim and simple walking length transatlantic steamer have I seen more correct dressing than on the broad promenade decks of the luxurious Prince Arthur, of the Munson Line.

Through the beautiful Long Island Sound by daylight one of New York's most fashionable women were a brown raw silk gown which neither soils nor shows dust easily, and which was made in a seven gored skirt, the tucked bottom of which just escaped the deck. The jaunty little jacket had the fashionable short flowing sleeve, which fell over the dainty sleeve of white raw silk shirt waist. The hat was a brown rough straw with strapings of ecru straw and an ecru coq plume drooped gracefully over the left side.

Another charming gown for the first steamer day, and for wear on landing was of porcelain blue linen, box plaited all around, and adorned at the bottom with two wide tucks which are repeated just above the knees. The shirt waist is tucked and trimmed with narrow embroidery. A white roll brimmed sailor with blue leather binding and white straw bow completes this costume.

And while on the subject of dress for your outing, remember that unrestricted lungs, are of paramount importance, and fortunately in the matter of a proper corset to accomplish this result health and fashion are not at a variance, so by choosing a correctly built and fashionable corset, such as the C-B a la Spirite, which holds the abdomen in and the hips back, you will find yourself taking full long breaths of health giving air, and come back from your recreation trip with renewed capacity for work or play.
