Ole Berg was coming to town Saturday afternoon about 2 o'clock and when at the bridge southeast of the poor farm the king bolt to his buggy broke and the buggy bed dropped down. The team pulled Ole out, dislocated his shoulder and inflicted several severe bruises.

Last Friday evening several young fellows at Ionia went to the home of Bill Dugger and were having some music. When Dugger came home from Mankato he was drunk and began to threaten the young folks, who left the house. Later he met one of the young men, Charles Jones, who had been present when he arrived at home, and attempted to stab him with a knife. Jones drew a revolver and shot Dugger twice, from the effects of which he died at 3 o'clock Monday morning. At the time of the shooting Mrs. Dugger was hiding from her husband in fear of her life. Jones gave himself up to the officers, but was released, and as public sympathy is with him it is doubtful if he will be prosecuted.

One of Lee's horses jumped clear over the wagon with the exception of his hindquarters, which caught in the box, upsetting the wagon, and the horse lay with his hind legs between the upper and lower boxes, pinned there by the weight of the wagon, on top of which was also the running gear of the other wagon.
