Now that the hitchrack problem has been settled, let's look around and see if we can not find a vacant room, conveniently located, that we can fix up for a "rest room" where the farmers' wives, daughters and little children can go to rest and "clean up" when in town, and where they can have a comfortable place to wait for their husbands and fathers after the day's trading is done with.

Oscar Burroughs, superintendent of the light and water plant, owns a splendid team of work horses which he says the city can use for the feeding. Why not accept his offer and use the team on the sprinkler? When not in use on this work the team could be put at other work on the streets, and in case of fire we would always have a team ready to haul the fire apparatus. What do you think of the scheme?

A committee from the Commercial Club, consisting of F. W. Cowben, D. W. Turnure and W. B. Saunders, circulated a subscription paper among the merchants Tuesday morning to secure money to erect a series of hitchracks for the use of the farmers who come here to trade. Enough money was secured to build the long-needed racks and the work was begun yesterday. The racks are being built along the south side of Fifth avenue between Webster and Cedar, and on the east side of Cedar between Fourth and Fifth.
