

Deaths and Funerals.

Mrs. O. C. Case.

Evangeline J. Case died Friday morning November 8 1907 at 9 o'clock a.m. at the Presbyterian hospital at Omaha following an operation performed for cancer of the liver. Her age at the time of her death was forty-seven years. She leaves her father, who is eighty years old, and is living at Lawrence, Nebr., and two brothers to mourn her loss. The remains were brought here for burial, arriving Saturday night. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at the home of Chas. Platt, an old friend of the family, and was conducted by Rev. J. M. Bates, pastor of the Episcopal church of this place. The remains were interred in the Red Cloud cemetery.

Miss Caldwell, of Lincoln, and Miss Brown formerly county superintendent of Cherry county were among those in attendance at the funeral.

Mrs. Ann Jane Noble.

Mrs. Ann Jane Noble died Tuesday, Nov. 5, 1907, at 2:45 o'clock, at the home of her son, W. S. Noble, in Walnut Creek township, in her 77th year. She had been ill for a year or more with dropsy, and her death was not unexpected. The funeral was held the following day, with a large attendance, and was conducted by Rev. George W. Hummel and Rev. Mahlon Points, the U. B. minister at Inavale. The burial was in the Walnut Creek cemetery, at the side of her husband, who died about a year ago. Mrs. Noble was the mother of ten children—four sons and six daughters—of whom five are living and three of whom were present at her deathbed.

Mrs. Noble was born at Egg Harbor, N. J., May 10, 1830, and united with the Baptist church at the age of 20 and remained steadfast in the faith until the time of her death. She was married to H. Noble March 30, 1859. They were among Webster county's pioneers having settled on their Walnut Creek farm in 1873.

Saved by Chemistry.

It may not be generally known that until this week one of Nebraska's fundamental industries hung in the balance on a question of color. Consumers demand white flour. They will have none of yellow bread, any more than they will have any but yellow butter.

Most high grade flours are yellowish when freshly milled. Nebraska flour shows a marked yellow tint. It must be made white or the Nebraska farmers and millers go out of the wheat business. The millers have mostly installed machinery for bleaching the flour white by one of two processes, in either of which the bleaching agent is the same, nitrogen peroxide. Was this process hurtful to flour or to the people who ate it? If so, it would come under the ban of the pure food laws, and Nebraska's fifty million bushels wheat would be for the pigs. The Nebraska's experiment station took up the question, making baling and chemical tests of over 100 samples.

wait breathless for the result was that the world did not know that a possible volcano was under its feet.

The millers knew, and the manufacturers of bleaching machinery.

This week sees the end of their awful suspense.

The bulletin is out, and it finds that bleaching neither injures nor improves the quality of flour.

The millers and the wheat farmers will not have to go out of business, neither adopt the alternative of persuading the people to change from pure white to yellow-white bread.—Ex.

FOOTBALL

High School Beaten at Lebanon.

The football game at Lebanon Friday between the Red Cloud High School and the Lebanon High School was hotly contested throughout, but our boys went down to defeat by a score of 6 to 4. After this no more games will be played by the High School team unless they all bona fide students, and not a team of grown men. The high school did well, indeed, to score so much under the unfavorable referee. This game could be contested as unofficial, as the grounds were 10 yards short, and no arrangement was made to play on such grounds. Captain Smelzer had the tendons of his right leg severely wrenched and may not play in any more games this season.

Red Cloud, 6; Grand Island, 5.

The football game played on the Red Cloud grounds Friday afternoon for the championship of the commercial colleges of the state between the Grand Island and Red Cloud Business Colleges resulted in a score of 6 to 5 in favor of the latter. The game was hard fought, but was marred by the visitors attempting to introduce pugilism as a part of the game. The teams were about evenly matched in weight.

The College Crescents go to Bloomington today to play the Bloomington town team.

The high school team was to have played the Franklin high school team today, but at the last moment the Franklin team backed out and consequently the game will not come off.

The Red Cloud High School and the Hastings High School football teams will meet on the local grounds Saturday, the 23d. The Hastings team has a reputation and will give our boys a hard game.

The basketball game between the Lebanon and Red Cloud girls Friday was quite exciting. At the end of the first half the score stood 21 to 0 in favor of Lebanon, and at the end of the last half the score was 24 to 3. Perhaps if the last half had been longer, the Red Cloud girls would have fared better.

One week from tomorrow, Friday,

November 22, the College Crescents play a return game with the Concordia Normal School football team on the grounds of the latter. The college team was defeated by one point in the last game with Concordia, played on the Red Cloud grounds a week ago last Saturday, and it is hoped will reverse the situation on the twenty-second.

School Notes

Mabel Thomas has been absent from school the past two weeks being sick with malarial fever.

Claud Cramer exchanged seats Tuesday morning for the fifth time this year. It isn't because he is a bad boy.

Last Friday afternoon the basketball team played Lebanon on their grounds. This was their first matched game. They worked well, but the score was 24 to 3 a victory for Lebanon.

Vera Law has been absent from school this week suffering with a sore throat.

Hettie Lorentz was absent from school.

The 12th grade went to Lebanon Friday. They had a fine time. About one half of the grade play in the football team.

The president of the ninth grade is sending out cordial invitations to her classmates to come and see type lice. Several have accepted the invitation.

American Bluejackets at Play.

The President of the United States is a firm believer in out-of-door sports and at the same time an earnest advocate of an efficient navy. With such a commander-in-chief, the men of our navy have one of many good reasons for being enthusiastic in their support of athletics.

When five thousand men from the ships of the fleet go to see their teams contest for the pennant of the battleship league, and return to their floating homes hoarse from cheering and rooting, it is evident that our bluejackets are American citizens with as wholesome a love for baseball as their brothers ashore. The navy department realizes that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," so every encouragement is offered to men who wish to take part in athletic sports. For those who desire to participate in athletics, baseball and football equipments, fencing foils, boxing gloves, wrestling mats, and so on are furnished. Teams are coached by officers who have played on the naval academy or college teams and the result is that our battleship teams play good baseball and good football and are not behind in other sports.

But baseball and football are not the bluejackets' only amusements, nor even the principal ones. In addition to the regular ships' boats for work, the navy department has furnished each of the large ships with a special designed racing cutter. There is always a ship's boat crew and frequently there are several other boat crews in training. Every year a regatta is held in which there are rowing and sailing races in every sort of ships' boats.

One favorite form of race is the combination rowing and sailing race. The boats pull from the starting point across the bow of a ship a mile away, step the masts, sail around a triangular course back to the flagship. All the boats in the fleet, numbering over one hundred, take part in a race of this kind and it takes careful observance of the rules of the road to avoid collision, as well as ability to handle the boat under sail.

During the visit of the foreign ships to Hampton Roads last spring international boat races were held. American crews proved their mettle by winning most of them. Among their opponents were British, French, German and Italian men-of-war men.

The officers and one hundred men from each ship are invited to a minstrel show on board the U. S. S. Kentucky at eight o'clock to-night" is the signal from the flagship.

About seven-thirty boats from all the ships begin arriving alongside the Kentucky.

By eight the bridges, turret and the fore-castle are filled with men all in clean white clothes, eager for the show to begin.

On the fore-castle a stage is rigged up with curtains and scenery.

In the minstrel troupe may be officers, seamen, coal passers and marines; each one chosen for his ability to present one of the features of the regular minstrel show: a song or dance; a monologue; music, etc. The hosts provide refreshments for their guests from the other ships and one evening of ship life is not monotonous.

Each of the larger ships has a minstrel troupe. Last winter at Guantanamo, Cuba, where the fleet spent three months, shows were given twice a week.

Each day there are band concerts on board; the men choose their partners and waltz around the deck with each other to get in practice for the next annual ball which each ship gives.

Those to whom athletics and dancing have less fascination than quieter amusements, may be seen during idle hours gathered around a chess board or playing high five or backgammon.

Men on vessels of our navy are much like those whose lives are spent on shore. Their work is different, but when they are at play, they are much like other red-blooded healthy Americans.

With all their amusements, there is the work of preparation for the time when play will have to be forgotten and when that time comes—God grant it may be a long time hence—the men who have played and the men who have watched the sports, will prove that they can shoot straight and fight hard and die, if need be, for the Stars and Stripes.
