We are going to tell you exactly why we are going to hold this Reorganization Cut Price Sale, so you can fully realize the EXTRAORDINARY BARGAINS you can secure by coming to it.

Owing to certain conditions and on another business proposition arising, we have decided to sell out this entire stock in as short a time as possible. We realize that in order to do so we will have to stand quite a loss. In some lines of goods in this stock we are going to sell out entirely. We will plainly state that never during the past four or five years has Good New Seasonable Merchandise been placed on sale at such Extraordinary Bargain Prices.

In fact, the entire Store will be a great Special Bargain Emporium during this Sale

WEARYIN' FOR YOU.

ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

Just a wearyin' for you—
Everything a-feeling blue,
Wishing for you: wondering when
You'll be coming home again.
Restless!—don't know what to do—
Just a-wearyin' for you.

Room's so lonesome—with your chair
Empty—by the fireplace there—
Just can't stand the sight of it!
Go outdoors and roam a bit,
But the woods are lonesome, too—
Just a-wearyin' for you!

Morning comes. The birds awake—
They are singing for your sake!
But there's sadness in the notes
That come thrilling from their throats!
Seem to feel your absence, too—
They're just a wearyin'—for you!

Evening comes. I miss you more
When the dark glooms in the door:
Seems just like you ought to be
There—to open if for me!
Latch goes tinkling—thrills me through—
Sets me a-wearyin' for you!

Blossoms, falling to the ground
Softly, like your footsteps sound,
And the blooms on flower and tree
Only paint your face for me!
Fairer when your face I knew—
Just a wearyin' for you!

Just a-wearyin' for you!
All the time a-feeling blue;
Wishing for you—wondering when
You'll be coming home again!
Restless!—don't know what to do—
Just a-wearyin' for you!

Animal Instinct.

A friend of mine saw two cats approaching each other on the top of a board fence. There was no room for them to pass each other, and he wondered what would happen. When they were near each other one of them stopped, turned around and retreated till it came to another board fence that joined at right angles the one they were on. The cat stepped off on this fence and waited there till the other went by. My friend thought this act showed an appreciation of the problem beyond the reach of instinct. No doubt those cats had met before, and one was master of the other. What more natural than that the defeated cat should retreat before the superior and when it came to the other fence step off upon it and let the victor pass? The action involved no mental process any more than when two inert bodies in motion meet each other and one gives way. There was no other course open to the cat. If she or he had turned back and taken to the side fence solely to accommodate the other cat, why, that were another matter.

The Gordon setter that met a train of cars upon a railroad bridge and stepped down upon one of the timbers of the bridge and stood there while the train passed gave no proof of reasoning powers. It was the only thing the dog could do. Nearly all animals know enough to get out the way of danger. If they did not, what would become of the race of animals?—John Burroughs in Outing Magazine.

Old Roman Laws.

The old Roman laws, according to Colquhoun, conferred on the husband complete emphy over the wife. All she owned or earned was vested in him, and he acquired the same rights over her person and property as if she were his natural daughter. The wife, on the other hand, acquired all the rights to a child and to her husband's name and succession in the event of an intestate estate, and she could exercise all the privileges to which her sex admitted. The power of the ancient Roman father over his offspring was originally perpetual, nor could the child be emancipated from the father's control during the father's life except by that parent's consent, nor did he become sui juris until the father (being himself sui juris) died, when the son was emancipated by the simple operation of the law. In those brave days the father had legal permission to scourge his children or to send them, fettered like slaves, to work on his estate or even to kill them, choosing whatsoever means for their taking off he thought proper.

Life Saving and Law.

The Roumanians are as curious in some things as the Chinese. A girl who fell into the river and was swept down by the current finally seized a bush on the bank and drew herself to shore. The owner of the land on which the bush grew immediately claimed a reward of 4 shillings because his bush was there and had saved her. Her father refused to pay, and there was a lawsuit. What the law has to decide is whether drowning people can make use of bushes on the bank without paying for the same or whether the assistance of the said bush is worth a certain sum of money.

In China if a person falls into the water no one must help him out, but at the same time a spectator can be imprisoned for not advising the victim to stay on dry land.

The Navel Orange.

For a product of nature a California navel orange as it graces the breakfast table or the push cart is about the most artificial thing in the world. It is also a very striking illustration of the fact that while beauty may be only skin deep it counts for a whole lot. To begin with, the navel orange of California is an exotic, reaching its present habitat after devious wandering. And, be it ever so sweet tasting, if its skin has had its beauty marred it scarcely ever gets farther than the orchard where it grew. Not only that, but even the most comely ones before they are boxed and shipped are brushed by machinery and polished and otherwise fussed with to give them a beauty which mere nature never would have provided.—William R. Stewart in Technical World.

Advice to His Doctor.

M. de Calonne, one of the last ministers of finance of Louis XVI., in his last illness asked for a pencil and wrote down the following words for the benefit of the doctor who attended him: "Docteur, vous m'avez assassiné! Si vous êtes un honnête homme, renoncez à la médecine pour jamais" (Doctor, you have murdered me. If you are an honest man, give up the practice of medicine forever).

Fear and Danger.

Nervous Old Lady (to deck hand on steamboat)—Mr. Steamboatman, is there any fear of danger? Deck Hand (carelessly)—Plenty of fear, ma'am, but not a bit of danger.

Little girls believe in the man in the moon, big girls in the man in the moon.

Suitable.

"What would be a suitable birthday present for my little boy?" inquired the fond mother.

"Let me think," returned the star boarder, who occasionally liked to sleep late in the morning. Then, with the glad, confident smile of one who has solved a problem, he added, "How would a gag or a straitjacket do?"—Chicago Post.

Sergeant (preparing squad for church parade)—Recruits! 'Shun! Those so can read will follow the regulations. Those as can't read will go through the requisite motions, as follows: One! Extend left! and 'olding prayer book. Two! Raise right hand to level of mouth. Three! Moisten thumb of right hand. Four! Turn over page.—London Punch.
