And that this is the fact is a matter of common knowledge. Rigidly and bravely enforced, without fear or partiality, this law would dissolve the great monopolistic trusts and restore free competition. Yet the truth is that since the law was passed, the number of trusts has quadrupled, while the amount of capital they control, both actually and by comparison, with the entire industrial capital, has enormously increased.

That the steel trust exists everyone knows. That it arbitrarily fixes prices the trust itself has proclaimed publicly, and that within the last few weeks. The law itself makes the trust and its actions illegal. Yet the administration has not lifted its finger to compel this great trust to obey the

The country is squarely face to face with the question whether the antitrust law shall be enforced. Its enforcement does not mean the closing down of the factories. But it does mean the dissolution of the trusts. It means that wages, the prices of raw materials, and the prices of finished products shall be fixed, not by a joint board, but by the great law of compe- state of Nebr. to L A Haskins. tition. It means honest business and fair prices, and these mean, in turn, more and better business and a more stable, just, and evenly distributed prosperity.

The non-enforcement of the law, on the other hand means a confession that this nation is not great and strong enough to enforce the law against monopolistic wealth. It means a confession that the trusts are stronger and more powerful than the people and their government. It means that the trust system is to continue, and grow, till the last vestiges of competition are destroyed, and private monopoly absolutely controls the industrial field. This, in its turn, means that
