James Peterson has closed a deal by which he comes into possession of the M. Stern property at the corner of Fourth avenue and Webster street, commonly known as the "rookery." It is to be hoped that now that this property has changed hands some arrangements can be made whereby the old structure may be torn down and a brick put up in its place. The old structure is so badly shattered and decayed that it would not be policy to fix it up. A good brick building placed there could be rented at good rentals from basement to the top story. We would rather see it stand as it is than see it patched up.
