ALMOST FORGOTTEN.

Incidents of Every Day Life Which Very Few People Stop to Think About on Account of Their Littleness

Fourth of July has come and gone and as a consequence of that glorious day our Almost Forgotten column was entirely forgotten.—This day was at one time given over to the celebration of the Declaration of Independence.

—Now each one, notably of course the men folks, endeavor to get in that convivial mood which will make them on the next day wish to be alone.—They run up against that elixir which when taken in improper doses produces that tired feeling.—The Guide Rock Signal editor intimates that there were a number in that pleasant little burg who were "obliged" to camp on the school house steps for want of better accommodations.—We suppose of course that they were young men and misses of that burg who had attended the dance until a late hour and then had been locked out by stern parents.

—Had our neighbor editor lived in Red Cloud he would not have used the word "obliged."—He would have long ago found out that camping on the school house steps at night is a favorite pastime with the boys and girls, and in fact on any old steps.—The editor of the Riverton Enterprise gets off the following: "Editor McMillan of the Red Cloud Chief was here as chaperone for the band boys on the Fourth."

—We would like to know what the Riverton editor knew about it, for the only time we met him he asked us if we had a bottle.—Of course as we have never been in the habit of carrying this useful adjunct to Fourth of July celebrations in our pocket we had to say no.—But we took pity on him and led him round to one of the Riverton joints and filled him up on "little red wagon."—The brand that they keep there is liable to make one seasick or see serpents.—It probably had a different effect on the editor, however, and as we walked down the street with one of the band boys, his vision was so affected that he thought we were chaperoning the whole band of fourteen pieces.—If we ever chaperone the Red Cloud band or any other band at Riverton they will have to change their brand of silverwit.—They say that Red Cloud's great free silver advocate, Cap. Houchin, was relieved while at Kansas City of some three dollars of free silver and his pass into the democratic circus.—Of course the fellow with the slippery dukes thought it was free and that he had as much right to it as the other fellow.—We always thought that Cap would get in trouble if he mixed up with Boss Croker and the democratic tiger.

—Capt. L. Archer, of the mission fields of Chicago, whatever old fields those are, has been holding a series of religious meetings on the street this week.—Whether they have done any good in a religious way we are unable to say.—They have at least during the time they were on taken off the minds of the business men the thought that this part of the country has a good chance to go to the eternal bow-wows.

—On Friday evening he will lecture on the "five devils of Red Cloud."—This tends to show that our city is getting better.—The last time the devils of Red Cloud were discoursed upon there were seven.—A few more lecturers on this subject and at this rate Red Cloud will have no more devils.—Julian Sapp may be gone but it is a cold day when Red Cloud cannot produce a detective.—We have it on good authority that it was not one of the Red Cloud contingent to the populist state convention who was found in a Lincoln alley with a dismantled beer keg for a pillow.
