

Every woman loves to think of the when a soft little body, all her own, will nestle in her bosom, fully satisfying the yearning which lies in the heart of every good woman. But yet there is a black cloud hovering about the pretty picture in her mind which fills her with terror. The dread of childbirth takes away much of the joy of motherhood. And yet it need not be so. For sometime there has been upon the market, well-known and recommended by physicians, a liniment called which makes childbirth as simple and easy as nature intended it. It is a strengthening, penetrating liniment, which the skin readily absorbs. It gives the muscles elasticity and vigor. prevents sore breasts, morning sick-ness and the loss of the girlish figure.

IRANDA ran into the meadow, laughing. The grassy slope shelved down into the valley, where the wood lay black and still. Daffodils nodded and cowslips bowed as she passed upon her way. A lark got up and rose singing to heaven. She sped out of the meadow and into the sunlight, and the sound of her young laughter floated down the valley; echoes joined it there, and the little ravine gurgled with merriment, Miranda stopped, with her chin in the sir, and listened. Was it all the ech. of her own delight, or was it something more? The peal of her mockery died into the sombre copse, and out of it, fresh and clear, a voice trilled merrily on its upward way. Miranda stood and waited.

He came up the bank of wild flowers, his face bright with the love of life and laughter, and at the sight of her he paused. The two faced each other for a while in silence, and then a smile ran round Miranda's lips, and the young man's eyes sparkled with

"I took your laughter for a signal," said he, making his beaming salutations; "but I reckoned little upon so charming an assignation." "It was but a signal of the spring, sir," she says with a dainty bow. "Nay," he replied, "I make no such distinctions between the seasons. I laugh the whole year through; it is the manner of the wise. You wil. perceive my jocund humor, fair mistress. Believe me, it's not the whim of an hour contrived by the guiles of spring morning, but a very settled disposition of the mind. I am broad-based upon gaiety." "Ah! to be gay!" cried Miranda; "to be gay is to live."

"Life is at our feet," said the merry youth. I take an infinite pleasure in its complexities. Believe me, nothing should matter, save the twinkling of an eye or the dimpling of a cheek.

"You are right," said Miranda, smiling. "How can one have enough of laughter?"

"We are of one mind," he answered pleasantly. "Let us go into our corner and be merry together. "Why not?" said Miranda. "Why

"There are 10,000 pleasures in this silly world," he went on, "and, for myself, I have not yet exhausted the tenth part of them. Count my years, then, and make three score and ten the dividend, and what remains? Pack them into the hours ever so neatly and you will not exhaust the store. And that is why I am a spendthrift of pleasures. I eke not out my delights. I would burn twenty in a straw hat out of sheer caprice and toss a dozen to the ducks upon the lake for pity.

"Yes, yes," agreed Miranda. "Time"-he continued with fine scorn-"Time has discovered us a con spiracy of ages to enthrone this melancholy. But we are not traitors to our rightful being, you and I, and we Monorary Graduate & Silver Medalist will clap a crown upon the head of

"Ah," she said, "you sigh. You yourself have felt and suffered. You have belied yourself! You sigh. There are facts in life even for sighs." "'Tis true," he answered softly, "yet I sighed for pleasure."
"What pleasure?" she asked curi-

"Or it may be hope," he added. He looked at her, and his gaze was mild and wistful. She regarded him in perplexity, and then a wild flush took her in the cheek and throat.

"Pooh! pooh!" she cried, and turned off, plucking at the hawthorne bush. The white may smelt rank, but strange and soothing; the petals shivered and fell. Miranda's heart beat on, wondering. Something clapped at its doors again and again. Would she open? What was this impatient visitor that pleaded so for entrance? She had so little knowledge; she was but newly arrived upon the world. Her emotions were still strangers to her; she was a pilgrim still among her new sensations. Ought she to open? Nay, to stay so and wonder was surely pleasantest. One day she would throw wide the doors and look. But now it was sweet to feel that hand upon the knocker, that clutching at the latch, and lie trembling within in feigned insecurity. She turned and faced him. Straightway the clamor ceased, looked him coldly in the face.

"You smile for love?" she asked.

"Yes, dear," said he, "and for the thought of you. "Oh, you take me too lightly," she broke out. "You do not guess what a solemn thing this love may be. You flutter into a thousand follies on the scantest reflection. You will dance, and you will play, and you will jingle-jangle through your hollday world without a thought for anything but pirouettes and jigs and whirligigs of laughter. The most sonorous of sacred sorrows may sound in your ears and wake no echo but a gape within your heart. And you would put me upon that dead plane of ribald merriment with yourself? I will laugh with you. Yes: I will go beg of you for jests in my jocund seasons. I am willing to shrick over your whimsicalities at my own pleasure. Women, a certain jeweler declares, ill-treat their rings to about the same is the only positive cure now known to extent that they do their watches, and the medical fraternity. Catarrh beare, herefore, really fit to possess neither.

Of course, it doesn't injure a ring to put it on a cold marble slab at night, nor to drop it occasionally to the brick pavement, but it does ruin the settings of the jewels, he says, to have a tight glove pulled on over them. Yet there is hardly a member of the sex, unless she wears so many finger ornaments that it's impossible to get a glove over them, who does not subject them to such severe treatment, and wonders and mourns when she loses a stone she

It is said by the porters of sleeping cars and the matrons of the various public places, however, that fewer rings are left now on washstands than was the case a few years ago, and this is probably because a large proportion of womankind seems to have made it a rule to keep such ornaments in their mouths while they bathe their hands.

A woman with a mouthful of jewels isn't a beautiful sight, but she's an ilustration of a certain sort of care, and t is a very refreshing one, when one considers the number who are forever having to advertise some valuable mislaid through their own carelessness.

SORES AND BRICK ULCERS.

Sores and Ulcers never become chronic unless the blood is in poor condition — is sluggish, weak and unable to throw off the poisons that accumulate in it. The system must be relieved of the unhealthy matter through the sore, and great danger to life would follow should it heal before the blood has been made pure and healthy and all impurities eliminated from the system. S.S.S. begins the cure by first cleansing and invigorating the blood, building up the general health and removing from the system A CONSTANT DRAIN all morbid, UPON THE SYSTEM.
When this has been accomplished the discharge gradually ceases, and the sore or ulcer heals. It is the tendency of these old indolent sores to grow worse and worse, and eventually to destroy the bones. Local
