concert every Sunday afternoon at The Irrepressible Rosewater interviewed by a "Bee Reporter.

> He Tells How He "Put it Up" on Johnson.

The BEE reporter in glancing over the Herald Saturdaymorning noticed that that sheet intimated editorially that Mr. George Taylor and Mr. Edward Rosewater are joint proprietors of John Baumer, who is making it uncomfortably hot for the Herald's pet in the celebrated contes ed election case; while in the evidence of Baumer, published in the local columns of the Herald, an insinuation is made by means of the sub-head, "Rosewater put it up," that the said Rosewater was the means of having Vandergrift, Johnson's brother-in-in-law, brought on to the witness stand. As this is a matter of considerable public interest, we determined to interview this irrepressible member of the Rosewater family. We have known him for some time past, and our relations have been for the past two years, and are now, quite in-Mr. Leopold Willing and wife timate. Knowing therefore that we could approach the King BEE next, and will also visit for some in his hive more easily than any months at Los Angeles, California, other individual in this city, we unhesitatingly did so, and interviewed him as follows:

Rep .- Mr. Rosewater, the Herald charges you with having put up a job on Johnson. What do you

Rosewater-The Herald is partly correct when it says I put "it" up, eago; E H Bullard, do; Chas Lin- if "it" means the bringing forward eoln; Miss R Greinn, Kentucky; of Vandergrift on to the witness

Rep .- Was there any foundation for the insinuation that there was Hansen, Silver City; W H Pad- a combination between you and Rosewater-No foundation what> ever, sir. "It" all came about as follows: About ten days ago I met Vandergrift while I was coming down from the Government headquarters, and he asked me if I had a job for him, or if I knew of any place where he could find employment. He stated he had a family dependent upon him, and that he was no longer employed in the Treasurer's office. He intimated that he could not get along with Johnson very well, but he did not give any reason. I promised to look | this Grange. After the usual busiaround and see if I could find any- ness was over, we adjourned until thing for him to do. Rcp.-Did you have any subsequent interviews with him? Rosewater-No; I have not seen him to converse wih him from that day to this. Rep.-How came you to be con- o'clock the pleasure seekers retired nected with this investigation? It to their respective homes, well seems that they pull you into most everything, and then pitch into you for it.

Rosewater-In conversation with some Republicans, a few days after meeting Vandegrift, I learned that there was quite a breach between the two brothers-in-law, who were not by any means as close friends as the Siamese twins were. The bond that had hitherto bound them together, had been successfully severed. I have always believed and suspected that there was some foul play in this ballot box business. The idea struck me at once, after thinking it over, that if any living man knew anything about Johnson, that man would be Vandergrift. Acting upon this idea I went to John Baumer, last Saturday night, and told him my idea of a plan that, if carried out right, would very likely knock the wind out of his opponent, if my theories were correct. I enjoined the utmost secresy upon him, and told him if he could bring it about so as to have Vandergrift produced as a witness in court by surprise, without letting Vandegrift know anything about the object of his being subpænaed. He would naturally, if he knew anything at all, be liable to let it all Rep.-What did Baumer think of this piece of strategy?

> Rosewater-He thought the idea a good one, and agreed to act upon it, and to carry it out. I enjoined him particularly to let no one into into the secret. Rep .- Was this plan executed as intended by you?

Rosewater-No, sir; Baumer communicated it to other parties, and on Tue day a subpoena was issued to Vandegrift to appear and testify on Wednesday. Tuesday night, as I was informed, Johnson and Vandegrift met and shook hands across the bloody chasm, entering into a very close "confab" over the situation. I then told Baumer that the plan would probably fail because of his indiscretion. Rep .- Did you have anything to do with George Taylor about Vandergrift's examination, and have you talked with him on the subject? Rosewater-Yes. George Taylor called my attention to the fact that Vandergrift and Johnson had had a falling out. This information
