THE editor of the Omaha Herald is respectfully referred to the follow-ing extract, from that staunch Democratic organ, the Cincinnati Enquirer:

"The Western man who enters and lounges around the Manhattan Club rooms, is in a house of political ill-fame, and his virtue will be with justice suspected by the people."

THE citizens of Omaha, and especially those who admire and revere the inevitable George Francis, will rejoice that he who might have been the next President of America still lives. From the New York Crusader of the 5th Inst., we glean that the great American Chief the French Commune has taken several hundred Turkish baths within the past four months, and now he has discarded the idea of being President or Dictator, and says that he has found out that it is a greater thing not to be a dictator than to be one. He asserts that it is a matter of fact that he has power of forctelling great public events. Upon looking into the future he clearly discerns and in fact smells approaching plagues and Asiatic cholera
