at a pretty lively rate yesterday morning at this city, which is but one of the many points at which immigrants enter the State. The following parties arrived in prairie schooners, which they steered to the State Immigration office, and there obtained from Col. Jesse Armstrong, and family of five, from Warren county, Iowa, bound for Sherman county. B. F. Smith, and party of five wagons and twenty persons, from eight, from Carroll country, Illinois, bound for Saunders county. J. M. Moore, and party of four, from Columbia county, Wisconsin, en route to Creighton, Knox county. G. A. Jarvis and wife, from Clark ley county. These immigrants, thirty-five persons in all, brought with them a great deal of good stock, plenty of farming utensils, and seemed to be endowed with more than an ordinary degree of intelligence.

In addition to these, there arrived by railroad, James Anderson and party of two, from Bolivar county, Mississippi, their destination being Sherman county; and Joseph Miller and party of four, from Albany county, New York, en route for Colfax county.

Street Preaching. Some enthusiastic individual filled to the brim with aromatic extract of rye alias benzine, alias fusil oil, gathered a large crowd in front of the Ogden, last evening, and commenced the delivery of an impressive but rather rambling and disjointed discourse. He was just "warming up" with his subject when the police put in an appearance, and yanked him down from the pinnacle of glory upon which he imagined he stood. He spent the night in the calaboose meditating upon the fate of all reformers and sleeping off the effects of his too liberal potations.—C. B. Globe.

He tells a story, then tries to start a laugh. His arguments, if such it can be called, was, that judges ought to decide in accordance with public opinion, and that public opinion was in favor of the crusade. That, he said, was what Taney, Andrew Jackson's tool, did; that was what Chase did, and that was what our judges ought to do. The only way, in his opinion, to convert saloon keepers, was for God himself to reach down with His all M.
