[From an English Magacine.] "Smoking-carriage, sir?" asked the tip-expecting porter, as he bore my rugs and minor packages along the platform. I said yes, and he, made me comfortable, and received The work originally published under the title for the New American Cyclorage and which was perhaps an which it has attended in all parts of the United States, and the signal devolutions in the United States, and art, have induced the editors and publishers to submit is to an article and publishers to submit is to an article and the last ten years the progressed distance and the last ten years to do do the last ten years the last ten years to do do the last ten yea

Duty to his employers made him endeavor to fill up, but the British anxiety to get as much room as possible for my money was strong within me, and stirred uncharitable suspicions.

You may lead a horse to the water, or an anti-nicotian old gentleman to a smoking-carriage, but you can't make him get in; and when each in turn put his head into my compartment, he jibbed, for some late occupants of it had been eigar, not, pipe, smokers, and it was rather strong. So I was

The work his been been that it is not a major resource for carrying it on the furnishment of the original stereotype plates have been used, but every pair is a few printer on new type, forming in fact a new Cyclopedia, with the same plan and compass as its predecessor, but with a far freater pecuniary expenditure, and with suffirmprovements in its composition as have been suggested by longer expenditure. Calming down. I the situation. Calming down, I hung up my hat, put on a gaudy piece of needlework won in mar raffle, lit my pipe, cut my papers and began to enjoy myself.

I sut in the left-hand corner, with my back to the engine, absorbed in a big lawsuit. It is great fun to read a cross-examination, and watch now a clever lawyer will make a clever man perjure himself. "It reads almost like a crime," I remarked aloud; "but then it is a lawful and beneficial crime. Soldiers kill people's bodies. Lawyers kill peoples's reputations, all for the good of society in the long run." While I was uttering the word "run," my ankles were grasped suddenly and firmly, then, before I

> THROWN PORWARD, SPRAWLING, I tried to rise, but my right wrist was selzed, and the arm twisted till I was helpless, and presently I found myself on the floor of the carriage face downward, a sharp knee being scientifically pressed into the small of my back, and both arms fixed behind me. My elbows were tied together, and then the knee was re-moved and my ankles were secured. During the latter operation I kicked and struggled. "Hum!" said a deliberate voice,

When he had done, I was as help-less as a dressed turkey. Then I turned over carefully and tenderly, and for the first time saw DIY ASSAILANT.

He was a gentlemanly looking man, dressed in a black coat and walsteent, gray trousers, and neck-cloth. His hair and whiskers were just turning grizzly, his chin and upper lip were clean shayen. His forehead was high, his eyes prominent and fixed in their expression, his nose aquiline, his mouth a slit. He was of middle height, spare, but wiry; indeed, his muscles must have been exceptionally elastic and feline, for you would have never thought, to look at him, that he could stow himself away under the seat of a railroad carriage so com-He contemplated me, with his chin in his right hand, and his right saved it. elbow on his left hand, he said thoughtfully: "Just so. And for the good of society in the long run— an admirable sentiment my dear sir; let it be a consolation to you, if should cause you any little annoy-

He took a shagreen spectacle-case from his pocket, wiped the glasses carefully with a silk handkerchief, and adjusted them on his nose. Then he produced AN OBLONG BOX, which he unlocked, and placed on one of the seats. After which he one of the seats, After which he sat down quietly in the place I had occupied five minutes before,—a position which brought him close over my head and chest, as I lay supine and helpless at his feet.

"Do you know anything of anatomy?" he asked. I was completely in his power as a witness in the eross-examining counsel's, and pru-dence dictated that I should be equally ready to answer the most frivolous and impertment questions with politeness. I said that I did "Ah!" he said; "well, perhaps you may have heard of the spleen? Exactly. Now science has never as yet been able to find the use of that organ, and the man who bequeathed that knowldge to posterity would rank with the discoverer of the circulation of the blood, and confer an inestimable benefit on humanity for the remainder of I PROPOSE TO DISSECT YOU."

"You will not get much glory for that" said I, forcing myself to seem to take this outrageous practical joke in good part. "An ungrateful generation may or may not profit by your discovery, but it will infallibly hang you?"

"Not so," he blandly replied: "I am a surgeon, who once had a very considerable practice, but I had to stand my trial for an experiment, which proved fatal to one of my pa-tients. The jury, unable to under-stand the sacrifices to which an earnest inquirer is ready to offer at the shrine of science, declared me mad, and I was placed in confinement. You see that I act with im-

And he opened the box. I broke out in a cold sweat. Was it all real? Could the man be in earnest? "But," said I, "surely you can get dead bodies to dissect, without having recourse to crime? And, again, if generations of anatomists have failed hitherto, why should you suppose that this one attempt should be more successful than the others.

C. H. SCHALLER R. A Ment B. & M. Land Office

EXERCISING THEIR NORMAN FUNC. "What!" I gasped. "You will never have the barbarity," and here my voice choked.

"Oh, yes; I have conquered that prejudice against inflicting suffering which is natural to the mind enfeebled by civilization. For many years I secretly practiced vivisection upon animals. I once had a cat,—an animal very tenacious of life, in the market today and the amount under my scalpel for a week. But and character of transaction has we have no time for conversation, You will not be put to any needless suffering. These instruments are not my own, blunted for want of under whose care I have been blaced before making my escape."
While speaking thus he took out the hideous little glittering instru-ments and examined them one by one. They were of various appalling shapes and I gazed upon them with the horrible facination of a bird under the power of a snake. Of only one could I tell the use—a thin, trenchant blade, which cut you almost to look at it. He knelt across me, arranged his implements on the seat to the right; laid a notebook, pencil, and his watch on that to the left, and took off his neckcloth aed collar, murrruring, "the clothes are VERY MUCH IN MY WAY, wish that you were properly prepared for the operation. It flashed across me in my depair, that I had heard of madmen being foiled by an apparent acquiescene in their murderous in-"After all," I forced myself to say," "what is one life to the human race? Since mine is demanded by science, let me aid you. Remove these bonds, and allow me to take off my coat and waistcoat.'

He smiled and shook his head. "Life is sweet, I will not crush ou," he said, unfastening my waistcoat, and turning back the lappels as far as he could. Then, taking a pair of scissors, he proceeded to cut my shirt-front away, so that presently my chest was bared to his exeriments. Whether I closed my yes, or was seized with vertigo, I do not know, but for a moment or two I lost sight of everything, and had visions; sort of a grotesque nightmare. It was the figure in which I recall but very indistinctly, but I remember that the most prominent of them was a pig, or a pork, hanging up outside a butcher's shop, the appearance of which bore a mysterious resemblance to my-self. These delirious fantasies were dispelled by a sharp pang; the anatomist had made

A FIRST SLIGHT INCISION; saw his calm face leaning over me; the cruel blade with which he was going to make another and deeper cut; his fingers, which were already crimson with blood; and I struggled frantically. My operator immediately withdrew his armed hand, and stood erect. Then watching his opportunity, he placed his right foot on the lower part of my breast-bone, so that by pressure he could suffocate me. "Listen, my friend," he said, "] will endeavor not to injure any vital organ, but if you wiggle about, I shall not be able to avoid doing so. Another thing; if you-" He was interrupted by three sharp gether. I was snot under the seat, where I lay uninjured and in safety, amid the most horrible din; breakng, tearing, shricking, cries for help, and the roar of escaping steam.

I had strained the bonds that seeured my elbows in the struggle, and the jerk of the collision snapped them; so that when I began to get my wits together, I found my hands free. To liberate my legs was then a very easy matter, but not to extricate myself— the next thing I set about. The whole top of the riage from where the cushion part ends was carried sheer away; and amid the debris which encumbered my movements lay the

ALL ABOUT THE WATER WORKS The central city of the West
Quite proud of late has grown,
And feels it can no longer wait
A good sized pand to own.
The greatest cities of the world
Who wish to cut a swell,
At once erect a reservair.

At once erect a reservoir Upon their hignest hill. We read in the days of Nonh That water wo ks were tried;
The trouble was they had no sewers,
And so the people died.
Let us then remember If water works we try, To put in sewers good and strong, And make our streets quite dry

And when the thing is done We'll celebrate at once,
Then everybody in the town
Will buy their hate of Bunce.
