> The car itself is an express car, fitted up especially for this purpose. The car is supplied with numerous tanks of water, in which are over thirty-six thousand fish of all sizes. Fresh air is constantly being pumped into these tanks by two pumps which are worked by a belt attached to the axle of the car. The water is purified by this means.

> Mr. Livingstone travels with the car, and has five employes, Mr. Myron Green being in charge. These gentlemen all sleep in the car, comfortable bunks being provided for that purpose.

Among the fish contained in the tank were 200 large sized black bass, and glass-eyed pike, from Lake Champlain; 36,000 small shad from the Hudson river; 1500 fresh and water fish. There is also a large number of trout, which belong to Mr. Stone himself.

The car started from Charleston, N. H., last Thursday, and thus far the trip has been very successful but a few fish having died. It cost about $4,000 to make the collection, and the transportation will cost about $5,000 more. A fresh invoice of ice was taken on at this point, and at Elkhorn and Laramie fresh water will be procured for the overland tourists.

About a year ago, it will be remembered, a similar car, but having on board a much more expensive cargo, was wrecked in the accident at Elkhorn bridge, and the fish all escaped into the river. Some of the present attendants were on board at that time, and have a vivid recollection of that event. The car went west on the 11:30

BEATING A BURGLAR.

A Thief is Clubbed Down a Ladder, and He Returns the Compliment by a Revolver Shot.

Yesterday morning about 3 o'clock Prof. S. D. Beals, residing on Davenport street, between Twenty-first and Twenty-second, was awakened from his slumbers, by a noise sounding like somebody pounding against the side of the house. Jumping out of bed, and going to the open window, he saw a man climbing up a a ladder, which he had placed against the wall. The Professor had no loaded weapons conveniently at hand, and the only thing he could think of was an old, stout and heavy hickory cane, standing in a corner of the room. This cane had been obtained by the Professor, many years ago, in the old capitol building, in which he was employed Having become well accustomed to the use of a cane during his days

of teaching the young ideas how to shoot, he grabbed up that cane with the same eager familiarity with which an old soldier picks up a musket to display his agility and skill in the manual of arms to the astonishment and admiration of a erowd of by-standers, and stationing himself at the window, he had not long to wait for the bold, aspiring, intruding, plundering burglar. As soon as his head came in sight, Professor Beals raised the cane, took aim, and let fly, but instead of splitting open the fellow's head, he salt water eels: 500 tautogs, a salt hit the window sill, breaking off a piece of wood, and tearing off the eatch. The stick happened to be too long, and thus the burglar escaped a merited caning. Not liking the unwelcome and given unexpected reception him, he immediately began retreating. Professor Beals struck two other blows at him, the last one hitting him on the shoulder, and knocking him off the ladder. Just at this moment, Mrs. Beals, who had come to the window and looked out, drew her head in as she saw the flash of a revolver, the loud report instantly following. After firing-probably only to frighten Professor Beals-the burglar disap-
