At first it was thought she might possibly recover, although it was known she had sustained internal injuries. Saturday morning at an early hour, she began failing, and at ten o'clock she breathed her last. The attending physician, Dr. McClelland, states that she fractured her spine and skull. She leaves a loving husband and son, who are almost heart-broken over her death. The funeral will probably take place next to-day.

John Noble is the name of an English noble man, who has for some past resided in Omaha, where he owned considerable property until quite recently, when he disposed of it for $25,000 or less, with the intention of returning to his native country. When his innumerable friends heard of this, they expressed their regret at his determination; they endeavored to persuade him to remain in Omaha, a city where he was so well known and generally beloved, and for which he had done so much. As the eve of his contemplated departure gradually but surely drew nigh, he gave a picnic to a few of his most intimate friends among the ladies, with whom he is a general favorite, and three or four of his warmest gentleman friends. This was a positive evidence of the fixed determination of Mr. Noble to return to England, and those who were not convinced before, now firmly believed that Mr. Noble was surely going to cross the briny deep. The citizens of Omaha, however, concluded to make another effort to induce Mr. Noble to remain. Accordingly a public meeting of the citizens was called. It was largely and enthusiastically attended, and resolutions of regret at his departure, and of hopes that he would after all conclude to remain in Omaha, were unanimously adopted. Mr. Noble was presented with a copy of these overwhelming resolutions, and every paper in the city published them, as each journal was numbered among Mr. Noble's personal friends.

A grand party in honor of Mr. Noble, was also given at the residence of a friend, and Mr. Noble there took occasion to reply to the resolution in a well-wooded, much-studied and eloquently delivered speech, which was published in full in an enterprising morning paper. Saturday morning's Herald announced infelicitous news of the fact that Mr. Noble would leave that afternoon for Yankton and thence would proceed to England. That announcement caused a universal pang of regret to shoot through the hearts of the Omahians. "Fare thee well and if forever, still for ever far from thee" was the unanimous quotation that was used on this occasion, with the addition of "Good bye, John, don't stay long, but write us a letter soon."

LATER—Since the above was written, the following note was handed us, and we must say that if it is reliable, and we hope it is, the Omahians will shout with joy: "Glowing to the universal regret of Omaha by the entire people of Omaha, at the prospective departure of Mr. J. Noble, to his native land, that gentleman has reconsidered his resolution, and determined to postpone his departure indefinitely."

On account of the Academy of Music having been captured by the Indians for Monday and Tuesday nights, the exhibition to have been given Tuesday evening by the pupils of the Nebraska Institute for the Deaf and Dumb, has been postponed to Wednesday, at 6 p. m. sharp.

An Omaha Man in Denver. M. C. Willour, who has for many years been engaged in the livery business, and purchase and sale of fine horses in Omaha and Chicago, has taken the Western House, with stables and corral, on Twelfth street, between Holladay and Larimer, west side. The house will be kept as a first-class hotel in every respect, and will be made particularly attractive to horsemen, stock owners and ranchmen. The stables will be kept in good style for boarding horses and for the accommodation of transient trade. The principal business of the proprietor will be the purchase, sale and handling of first-class carriage horses. A long experience in the business, and acquaintance with the best horse breeders in the states, will enable him to serve those who wish to purchase good stock in an acceptable and satisfactory manner.—Denver News, 10th.

Sioux City and Kearney Railroad. On the 10th inst. an enthusiastic meeting was held at Columbus for the purpose of organizing a company to build a railroad from a point opposite Sioux City, Iowa, to Kearney on the Union Pacific. All the counties along the line of the road were represented, and the bonds of the counties were pledged to aid in constructing the road. The articles of incorporation will be filed with the Secretary of State at the earliest practicable moment. C. W. Dake, Esq., one of the leading bankers of Kearney, is elected president of the incorporators.

Provision was made to survey the route, and an efficient engineer employed to commence the preliminary surveys. On Thursday evening an enthusiastic meeting was held at the city hall, in Columbus, to consider the building of a narrow gauge railroad from Dakota county to Columbus, thence south to Manhattan, Kas. Many of the counties along the line were represented. A committee was appointed to inquire into the feasibility of constructing said road and to ascertain what can be obtained along the route to aid the enterprise. From present indications there is good prospect of the early completion of this road.

Death of Mrs. Hertzman. The many friends of this estimable lady will be pained to learn of her death, which occurred Saturday forenoon, the result of the injuries she received on Thursday evening, by falling down cellar at Gen. Perry's residence, where she went to call upon a French lady acquaintance.

At first it was thought she might possibly recover, although it was known she had sustained internal injuries. Saturday morning at an early hour, she began failing, and at ten o'clock she breathed her last. The attending physician, Dr. McClelland, states that she fractured her spine and skull. She leaves a loving husband and son, who are almost heart-broken over her death. The funeral will probably take place next to-day.
