A FAST YOUNG MAN.

How a Little Cheek Foists one into Society, and how a Great Deal of the Article Kicks one out of it.

More Cranes than the Sand-Hill.

About eight months ago the dippant bucks of the city rejoiced in the acquisition to their number of one W. N. Crane, a very handsome, gentlemanly and well dressed individual. His debonaire and affability made him a general favorite with the sporting fraternity, and it was not long before he worked himself into the good graces of several prominent citizens, and was introduced into the best society, and had free access to any residence in the

A moral laxity was frequently observed in the conversation of this young man, but it was considered nothing more than a whole-hearted, blunt, good naturedness, characteristic of the fellow, and little noticed. Suspicion was aroused, however, when it leaked out that Crane was a frequenter of the many brothels, and that he kept, in a remote quarter, a courtezan at his expense. His profligacy became more and more open, and he squandered his carnings with prodigal recklessness One by one the diamonds that ornamented his manly bosom were transferred to a pawnbroker's window; one by one his intimates became less sociable and finally abandoned him altogether.

As the consumation of his auda city, he attempted a liason with the wife of one of our most prominent citizens. The indignation, in jured honor, and kindling rage of the husband knew no bounds, when his wife hastened to divulge the brazen impudence of the rascal.

Arming himself, he swore, helped him God, he would murder the villian, and the threat came from too reliable a source, to doubted.

THD DEAD PRELATE.

Impressive Funeral Services at the Cathedral.

From the moment of the sad an nouncement of the death of the venerable Catholic Bishop of this diocese, attention has been centered upon the day fixed for his funeral The tolling of the bell-the mournful feeling which such sounds create -these were little when compared to the depth of sorrow which thrilled the hearts of the entire Catholic Monday, until quite late, crowds of people were wending their way to the church to engage in silent prayer-some to act as watchers, or as a guard of honor over the corpse, and atservices this morning, thousands flocked to the church to be present at the removal of the remains from the Parochial residence to the place prepared for their reception in the Cathedral. The scene after mass was very affecting, the throng going up one side of the aisle to look upon the familiar face, in death, of their beloved Bishop, and making their exit on the other. The dead Bishop was dressed in full canonical robes, and his face, lying in the coffin, wore a serene and natural expression.

Tears flowed copiously from many eyes, the young and the aged blending their tears over departed worth. Preceding the solemn requium mass, the office of the dead was sung by the assembled clergy; after which the most impressive of all the ceremonies of the Catholic Church took place-the "Requium Mass." The mass was sung by an efficient choir of well-trained volces

Rev. Dr. Foley; and the Bishop of St. Joe, the Right Rev. Dr. Hogan, and nearly all the priests of this and adjacent dioceses were present. The sermon was preached by the Bishor of Chicago-Dr. Foley. It was eloquent, feeling and able; but at times the reverend gentleman betrayed much emotion. At the conclusion of the sermon, the vast congregation took their last, long look at the race of the dead. The corpse will lie in state until 5 o'clock p. m., and then the casket will be lowered to the vault under the high altar.

Thus ended the last rites of the Church to a distinguished prelate and the last earthly honors to a worthy gentleman and exemplary citizen. The Cathedral was most tastefully decorated in mourning. The following ladies took an active part in completing the decoration, viz: Mrs. Col. Burke, Miss S. Conneley, Miss Crawford, Mrs. John Creighton, Mrs. McShane, and Mrs. Cummings, while Mrs. Harman Kouttze sent a magnificant wreath of imortelles.

> The Casket was a superb piece of workmanship, elegantly mounted, and was from the workshop of Jacob Gish.

From beginning to end the deepest sorrow was visible, and during the long burial service, though the heat was intense, and many were obliged to stand, yet the desire to show respect to a good man, and honor a life which had added lustre upon an entire people, caused many to linger after mother earth had received her child.

Colves in Sheeps' Clothing. FREMONT, NEB., July 6.

EDITOR BEE: I was astonished yesterday to discover that Mr. J. W. Davis had actually taken the stand before the public to preach against corruption, denounce monopolies, high railroad tariffs, &c. &c.

I could scarcely believe that a rew years could effect so marked a change in human sympathies as has apparently been done in this instance. I was an employe when the Union Pacific railroad was being constructed, when this man Davis was in the ring of Credit Mobiler plunderers, when he kept most detestible hireling, M. B. Sprague, to do the very lowest work of villainy and imposition upon poor laborers. I remember when he and Durant, to cover up certain frauds which were known to have been practiced in the head departments, got up a sham investigation, and after pro-curing the known clue to all irregularities, quietly managed to get them covered up. I remember the poor laborers and they were hum-bugged by the hundreds, who were swindled by payments of a circulating medium of J. W. Davis and associates, which many hold yet to-day. Who does not remember when Davis hireling "Sprague" was odious to honest laborers that he had to keep behind the protecting bayonets of Uncle Sam's (despotic!) soldiers to avoid receiving the lynch law, practically enforced. How was it that the names and doings of his associates were all kept in the dark. How was it that he of all of them by some mysterious means had his property so arranged as to be beyond the reach of the law. Mr. Davis is indeed the man to expose corruption; he understands now it is done; he has talents; he could beat back pay salary grabbers all hollow. By the way, where was he during the Credit Mobilier investigation? Did he, like his brotherin-law Train, play the lunatie? Or was he toiling on his farm to raise money to redeem his "inflated currency? Or was he studying law, to see how a man can live sumptu ously on the interest of his debts, by placing his property in the hands of relatives and friends?

Farmers and mechanics, if allow yourselves to be drawn into the approval or support of such political demagogues, beware you are not treated as was the railroad employe, who, after furnishing all notes requisite to prove the men in office during a sham investigation, was told, a few days later, that he was a stranger, and had never been seen by this imposter, who, of all others had been instrumental in introducing him to Duant, and exhibited an extraordinary amount of zeal in ferretting out the truth, in order the better to hide it If the railroads charge high tariffs, it is because they have had their life-blood near y sucked out at the outset; if corruption exists in our government, it is because people are too easily misled by the soft-palaver of demagogues who would cry "stop thief" to divert attention from their own movements.

I trouble you with these few lines because, knowing what I do, it is disgusting to see so much allusion o corruption, etc., from such pregnant sources and be silent. AN EX-EMPLOYE OF THE U. P.
