CHICAGO IN FLAMES!

The Conflagration Almost Equal to That of 1871.

CHICAGO, July 14. A great fire is raging in South Chicago, about the vicinity of Michigan street and La Salle street.

Half a mile of buildings are now in flames, and all efforts of the firemen thus far are futile to check its progress.

Buildings are being blown up, and the whole force of the fire department are on the spot, with every means available for fighting the fire.

The streets are jammed with teams, moving goods from the place.

The fire started at 4:30 this afternoon, on Fourth avenue, near Twelfth street, in South Chicago.

It ran north and northeast, through Fourth avenue, Third avenue, State street, two blocks on Wabash avenue, and a large number of houses on the eastern portion of the street.

It took the postoffice, several fine churches, and a large number of blocks, the number of which is not attainable yet.

At half past 6 o'clock the fire had made almost a clean sweep up to the corner of Third avenue and Park street, burning up the houses of thousands of people at the above corner.

The fire department commenced the process of blowing up buildings with gun powder, but the buildings experimented with were but small wooden affairs, and would only have the effect of making a quicker blaze of them, and the wind blowing in it does very fresh from the south-south-west.

The fire is now on the verge of the fire line of our big fire at Harrison street—the fire line of Wabash avenue is now in full blaze, which takes many a stately building in its course, which offered a haven of refuge in 1871.

The fire is just now in the rear of the First Baptist Church, and should that structure go down, the fire will have a clear sweep to the northward and eastward.
