TEACH CHILD SELF-RELIANCE

Wise Parent Can Inculcate Invaluable Quality at an Extremely Early Age.

One of the most valuable lessons that a child can learn is that of selfreliance. A great many parents think that this characterstic is inborn, but it is not altogether so. Of course. some children are more gifted in this respect than others, as it is largely a matter of personality, but at the same time it is a trait which the parent can do much to help the child to attain. It is certainly a characteristic which will come into play in his later life more than almost any other, and therefore, the less self-reliance a child shows in his early years the more careful the parents should be to help him develop it. There are many ways in which this an be inculcated, and once the idea is given the child will do much to develop it himself. Teach him to rely as far as possible upon his own taients and abilities, and help him to cultivate them so that as early as possible he may depend upon them for his own support. Let him learn to find his way about alone and not be afraid to travel without the company of an older person. Teach him to plan things for himself.

Let him learn to do things. Show him that you trust him and that you know you can depend upon him. This is very important, as a child that feels that his elders have not confidence in himself, and, therefore, seldom accomplishes anything by himself-in short, he has not the quality of selfreliance or self-confidence, and is not in a fair way of acquiring either one.

CHILDREN IN COTTON MILLS

Pressing Social Problem That In the Near Future is Going to Call Loudly for Solution.

The labor of children in cotton manufacturing plants presents one of the most pressing social problems of the day, for the industry is living up to its reputation as a large employer of children, says a bulletin from the census bureau. "The average number of children under sixteen years of age employed as wage-earners was 39,306. of whom nearly one-half were girls,' it states. "Children constituted 10.4 per cent. of the total number of wageearners. In three of the southern states, Alabama, North Carolina and South Carolina, nearly 19 per cent. of all wage-earners were children under sixteen years of age. In Massachusetts, the leading state in the industry, however, only 5.7 per cent. were children. Practically one-half of the wage-earners employed in the cotton manufacturing industry in 1909 were in establishments where the prevailing hours of labor were between 54 and 60 per week, and nearly one-third were employed in establishments where the hours were 60 per week. About one-fifth of all the cotton mill workers in three southern states are children less than sixteen years old.

Still Controls Spirit of Music. Despite his seventy-eight years, Saint-Saens recently appeared before a representative Perlin audience and played with remarkable fluency, transparent clearness and evenness of passages, while his touch was elastic, his tone full round and of a beautiful quality. Moreover, the ease and nonchalance with which he played astonished his hearers. He exhibited an astonishing amount of vitality in other respects, too. When Claire Dux sang wo vocal numbers-en aria from the opera "Henry VII" and the chanson La Cloche"-Saint-Saens sat down at the piano and played the accompaniment with exquisite touch and refine- for three consecutive weeks prior to said day ment, following the singer with the greatest fidelity. He played both accompaniments and also his piano solos from memory.

Puzzle in Electricity.

It is amazing what a tremendous electric shock a man may receive and yet not be killed. No less amazing is it how small a shock will kill. It all depends upon the circumstances of the shock. To kill, the shock must pass through the brain, heart or upper part of the spinal cord. A shock from a weak current, if received over a large area of the body, will do more damage than a shock from a powerful current that effects only a small and not vital part of the body.

Dr. H. Zangger of Munich, in a recent paper, asserts that a 50-volt current is dangerous if received under the most favorable conditions. Law Almed at Injustice. Bank clerks and matrimony have been the subject of legislation by the Australian parliament. The assembly has approved of a new clause in the criminal code bill, by which any person or corporation, prohibiting, under threat of dismissal, the marrying of any employe over twenty-one years of age, will be liable to a fine of $1,500, or three months' imprisonment. The clause is the outcome of evidence in the arbitration court that the Western Australian banks prohibit the marriage of clerks receiving under $1,000 per annum.

Safety in Submarines.

A new life-saving device was tried out at Spezie, Italy, when a turret invented by Capt. Virginio Cavallini, for fixing on submarines, was experimented with. Should the submarine sink to the bottom from any cause, the sailors can take refuge in the turret, which, by an ingenious mechanism, is then detaced from the vessel and rises to the surface. The experiments are said to have given conclusive proof of the practicability of the invention.

The time to guard against disappointment is at the start. Look around and investigate the frame houses that have been standing for as many as thirty years and compare them with those constructed of other materials. Time alone is the real test of home building materials, because you don't build a home every ten years, and few people can afford to experiment with fads or theories. After making your com. parisons come in and see the nice, bright lumber we have in stock and let us tell you in actual figures what a good frame house will cost you today.
