GERMOZONE

is good for chickens, as well as for all other birds and for domestic and pet stock. Germozone is, beyond doubt, the most popular medicine for poultry in the world today. It is so because it fits nine out of ten needs in poultry disorders, except the need for insecticides. For roup, cancer, swollen eyes or head, running at eyes or nose, diarrhea, etc. Use one-half ounce per quart of food, etc. you want (regret trying Germozone first. Of great value as a preventive. Sold by leading dealers in poultry remedies at 50 cents, or postpaid from Omaha. Send for latest literature on the care of poultry and pet stock.

TECHNICALLY ONCE OF USE

Undoubtedly Served Good Purpose When Criminal Laws Were So Unreasonably Severe.

You remember the trial scene in "The Merchant of Venice." The "quality of mercy" has failed. The learned Daniel of Judgment has refused the plea to "wrest once the law to your authority." Shylock is whetting his knife for the pound of flesh. And then—"Tarry a little, there is something else. The bond doth give thee here no jot of blood"—a technicality. All through the English law of the period I am discussing, English criminal lawyers, with the connivance of humane English judges, were playing the part of Portia, inventing ingenious excuses by which humanity might triumph over barbarism. Here is a man indicted for stealing a sheep—penalty, death. The proof was that he stole a ewe, but the statute used the word "ewe" as well as "sheep," and the prisoner escaped. He had not stolen a sheep.

In 1827, an indictment read that the jurors "on their oath," instead of "on their oaths," charged a man with a crime and for this reason the indictment was found defective and on this technicality the prisoner was discharged.

That these technicalities were in their own time undesirable substitutes for the law reform must be admitted. But they had a reason for existence, due to the barbarous condition of the criminal law.—World's Work.

OYSTER NOT GOOD FOR ALL

Many Stomachs to Which It Is Not a Welcome Visitor, According to Physician.

It is popularly supposed that the oyster digests itself in the human stomach owing to the great size of the liver, which is crushed as mastication begins and is thought to digest the mollusk itself. As the oyster, moreover, contains some ten per cent. of extremely assimilable protein, together with phosphorized fats and glycogen, it has always been freely administered to convalescents, while dyspeptic boys vivants have never hesitated to eat it abundantly.

Doctor Pron expresses the opinion that the oyster may be allowed, therefore, to those dyspeptics whose gastric functions are deficient. In anorexia, gastric atony, ulcer and incipient cancer, and to convalescents from acute disease, as it is likely to improve the appetite and to excite the stomach to increased motor and chemical activity.

But to the large number of dyspeptics whose stomachs are hyperacid or hypersensitive Doctor Pron would forbid the oyster as well as all other stimulating foods. In many of these dyspeptics the gastric secretion is already sufficient, and it is unnecessary and unwise to increase it.

What Came Up.

An Englishman was driving around County Tipperary one warm day, when he came across a farmer setting potatoes. Thinking to have a joke with him, he began:

"Well, Pat, what are you planting?"
"Praties, sir," said Pat.

"Do you think potatoes will come up?" asked the Englishman.

"Of course," said Pat.

"Why, I set onions last year in our garden, and carrots came up," said the Englishman.

"Oh," said Pat. "I set an acre of turnips last year in that field over there, and do you know what came up?"

"No," replied the Englishman.

"Mike Murphy's old black donkey, and ate them all," answered Pat.

Mean Inclusion.

She was a plump widow with two charming daughters. She had been a "felle" just a year, and was beginning to wear her "weeds" lightly. All the same when the new curate called upon her she sighed:

"Ah, I feel the loss of my poor, dear husband very much. I never have any appetite for anything now."

The curate was all sympathy, and in the endeavor to cheer her by pointing out what a comfort to her her daughters must be, replied:

"I can quite understand that, but you are so laced in—"

"S-i-r!" interrupted the indignant lady, "allow me to inform you that I am not laced in at all."

Lloyds.

The earliest reference to the famous underwriters' association known as Lloyds appears about the year 1688, in the London Gazette. This great commercial establishment had its origin in a "coffee house" kept by one Edward Lloyd, in Tower street, London, where certain merchants were in the habit of meeting for gossip or business. In 1692 Lloyd moved to Lombard street, where he virtually began the business which is now so well known all over the world under his name.

When Willie Took Action.

"Dick, the minister will be here for supper," said his mother, "and you must wait and have yours after we are through."

Just before the supper was ready Dick slipped into the dining room and crawled under the table. When the time came to serve the dessert the minister praised the cake very highly and was enjoying the second piece, when Dick called out from under the table:

"Don't you eat all that cake. I want some."

Impassable Roads Are Unnecessary

Impassable mud roads, says the Nebraska College of Agriculture, are unnecessary if there is enough public spirit in a community to give them proper care. The use of the King road drag is advised when used at the proper time. There are no periods of the year when the drag does not benefit the road, but it does the most good when the soil is moist, yet not too sticky. The Nebraska soils, when mixed with water, thoroughly worked, and well baked with sunshine, become extremely hard and impervious to rain. The action in becoming hard and smooth not only helped to shed the water but also greatly retards the formation of dust. Complete information as to the construction and use of the drag may be obtained free by applying for Press Bulletin No. 33 of the Bulletin department, University Farm, Lincoln.

Farmers Assist Cholera

The farmer himself is the largest single factor in the spread of hog cholera according to data collected from the four demonstration areas by the department of agriculture. The exchange of work is chiefly responsible for this, says an animal pathologist at the University Farm. Helping a neighbor haul exposes hogs and afterward using the same wagon to shuck corn is a fairly certain method of getting cholera. Visiting a sick herd for any reason whatever is a poor practice. The vendor of stock foods and powders seeks the sick herds and is a likely carrier of infection. Know positively where the family dog is at night. If loose, he may be miles away and bring home his load of germs. In the winter, crows have a liking for feed lots and range a long distance. The old medical injunction to "clean out, clean up and keep clean" should be applied to cholera outbreaks. Make a practice of burning at once every animal that dies on the farm. Serum is not the largest weapon in the fight against cholera.

Free Hog House Advice

Farmers expecting to build a hog house should first send their plans to the agricultural engineer of the University Farm, Lincoln, for his personal advice regarding the construction, and particularly the placing of windows, as the maximum sunlight in the pens at farrowing is a thing of great importance. On account of the large area of Nebraska the sun falls at many different angles over different sections of the state during the different months, and the windows should be placed accordingly. If hogs are to farrow during different months of the year, the house should have continuous rows of windows not only along the south, but the east and west as well.

Alfalfa Seed Industry

The production of high grade alfalfa seed promises to become an important industry in Nebraska. Last spring the amount on hand was reported at 438,333 pounds. The season of 1913 was marked by a tremendous increase in the growing of this seed which was pronounced excellent in quality.
