Corner Stone Laid With Impressive Ceremonies by Masonic Grand Lodge

The most formal and impressive ceremony of the kind ever held in this city or county was the laying of the corner stone, last Thursday afternoon, of Webster county's new temple of justice. A large number of people gathered to witness this ceremony, which nearly everyone was to see for the first time. The Masonic fraternity had complete charge of all the details, and everything was carried out with dignity and impressiveness. The Red Cloud cornet band furnished the music for the occasion, which was greatly appreciated.

Besides the members of the grand lodge there were in attendance many members from over the state and nearby towns. Grand Master Davis was the presiding officer and Grand Custodian French assisted in the ritualistic work. Before this corner stone was allowed to repose in its place permanently it was subjected to several tests, first by the knight of the square, who placed his instrument on all sides and pronounced it perfect; then the master craftsman, who specialized with the level, tested the stone with his instrument and pronounced it good; then the plumb was used and the stone found to be all that could be asked. After having satisfied themselves that the stone was perfect, the decree went forth that it should be filled with the sacred records, which was done. It was then laid in place and carefully jointed up, where it will remain, as we believe, until time shall be no more.

The records were as follows:
Copy laws of Free and Accepted Masons.

Copy proceedings of grand lodge of Nebraska, 1913.

Copy laws Royal Arch Masons, 1913.

Roster county lodge, A. F. & A. M. Holy Bible, furnished by Charity Lodge.

The large audience listened with eagerness to every portion of the ceremony, which was a duplicate of that one inaugurated in the remoteness of the dim past.

This building is being built as rapidly as could be expected, as a glance at the picture will show. The contractor is well equipped for his work and it will not be long before our court house officials will be in their new quarters and ready for business.

The evening session was opened with a session by Coyia Spring and her sister, who rendered another pleasing entertainment. Miss Lotus Spring is a cellist with a style and finish that enable her to render even the most difficult pieces in a free and easy manner. The short prelude by these two artists was indeed too short, according to the insistent encores by the large audience.

Wednesday afternoon's session opened with a prelude by the Rihedaffer Galley company, which was very meritorious. Violin solos by Miss Galley were enthusiastically received.

The lecture of Wellington Vandiver, of Alabama was a disappointment, his lecture on "The Appalachian Mountaineer" not being given and his substitute lecture was not relished by those present.

At the evening session an added attraction was given by the Red Cloud Concert Band, which gave an hour of high class selections as only this enviable band can.

The Rihedaffer Galley company gave an entertainment consisting of vocal,

Chautauqua Attracts Very Large Crowds

The Chautauqua opened Sunday afternoon with an audience of nearly two thousand persons and were greeted by that eminent musical director Liberati and his famous band and grand opera singers. Liberati is a past-master in his art, and with his band of soloists and singers, certainly sustained his envious reputation as to the merits of his famous organization. Though the band was small in number the talent contained within the baton reign cannot be excelled, not even including such larger bands as Sousa's, Innes', Pryor's, Banda Rossa's, Creation's, Godfrey's, and others of national reputation. Not only did Liberati please his large audiences, but the operetta selections by his opera singers held the large audiences on edge with every selection. The baritone solo by the member of the band was one called for repeated applause. Not only is Liberati an exquisite director but also a cornet soloist of envious ability as his solo proved.

A heavy wind and rain storm shortly after the afternoon session hardly dampened the eager audience who wished to hear this organization again needless to say the evening concert was received by a great appreciative audience.

Monday's afternoon program opened with a prelude by Miss Marietta La Dell a reader who gave a very clever reading. Her ability to mimic children and persons of all ages was a rare treat and was pleasingly received by a large audience.

The lecture, "The Criminal In The Making," delivered by Judge Frank P. Saddler of Chicago Municipal court, was interesting, brought out many ideas and things, to one who has never lived in a large city. His lecture was well received and was delivered in a forceful manner.

The evening session was opened by a prelude by Miss La Dell in another reading that was enjoyed by all present.

The lecture of the evening was given by Madam Lydia M. von Finkenstein Mountford, a native of Jerusalem, Palestine, and was illustrated with paraphernalia brought from her native land. Her lecture on Biblical lands and the Holy Land, and her explanation of symbolical knowledge of the Bible were educating and interesting to her large audience, and those who had the pleasure of hearing this famous lady now have much clearer understanding of the Bible.

The Tuesday afternoon session was opened with a prelude by Coyia Spring and sister in a combination entertainment. Miss Coyia Spring is not a newcomer in our midst and her work this time is stronger than ever before. Outbursts of applause and repeated encores tell more than words can the appreciation of the large audience.

Dr. John A. Gray of New York city lectured on the subject, "Out of Work." Dr. Gray is a man of pleasing personality and a fluent speaker, one who kept his large audience literally "on their toes." His story of living three months right among the hoboes, the derelicts of that great city, mingling with those thirty-five thousand and homeless inhabitants of the Bowery, and his experiences, during those
