WM. L. WEESNER.

The city council has purchased a new fire whistle which will be installed just as soon as the superintendent can find time. There will not be any question about hearing this new fire alarm when it is ready for use.

The Chamber of Commerce should take action in regard to the public drinking fountain. The one that stands on the four corners should either be fixed so that it can be used or else it should be removed and others supplied to take its place. As it is, it is useless and speaks of what might have been in days gone by.

Col. Spence and Col. Barker are making a red-hot campaign for the legislature in Franklin county. Personally either of these gentlemen would make an ideal state officer, because both are well equipped for the position owing to their activity in public affairs, but on account of political tendencies Col. Barker has our hoping.

The Democratic state convention was one of the most harmonious ever held in the state, notwithstanding the frantic efforts of our opponents. It was a great disappointment to those who would have been pleased to see a wide division among the workers. The Chief was much pleased that Thompson was made chairman. He ruled fairly and to his discretion was due the credit for much of the harmony that prevailed. The Democrats now present a united organization and there is no question about a sweeping victory next November.

The work of an official should be judged by results, not by the amount of noise coming from his office. Judged by what he has done, Governor Moorehead is deserving of recognition at the hands of the voters of this state. Without any bluster or headline advertisement he has quietly but persistently gone about his duties and has produced results that are very gratifying. During his administration, among other good measures the following laws were passed and placed into operation: Voting by mail law, pure linseed oil law, standard of weights and measures law, cold storage food law and county telephone law. To our way of thinking the single biggest thing Governor Moorehead has done is the reformation of the state reformatory. This institution is no longer a disgrace to the state. The unfortunate now in the state penitentiary are treated as though they were human beings and the infamous custom of smuggling drugs detrimental to the lives and morals of the inmates has been abolished. For this one thing alone the Governor should be returned to office.

Wasteful Practice

Much valuable fertilizing material is lost when farmers burn their straw stacks. The straw, decaying in the soil, supplies the needed elements for boosting production and holding the moisture in the ground. The practice of burning straw stacks is being vigorously condemned. The farmer could easily spare the time necessary to spread the wheat straw over his field.

Plowing To Save Moisture

All of the considerable number of tests that have been made during the past several years show an advantage of plowing over disking to store water. If the weather continues dry during a test of this kind or if the disking kills the weeds as thoroughly as the plowing, little difference will be found. If the disking, however, does not kill all the weeds the difference will be greater, depending upon the amount of water used by the weeds. Where heavy rains come during the test, the advantage of plowing over disking will be greater. The plowing puts the soil in better shape than does the disk to catch the heavy rains.
