If you really want a paper you should pay for it promptly and if not, pay up the balance due and request that the paper be discontinued to your address. It's an easy matter to stop the paper."

Charles Klein's greatest work, "The Lion and the Mouse" is scheduled for a welcome visit to the opera house on Thursday night, February 4, and is but fair to the intelligence of the local theatregoing public to predict that it will be seen by as many who have never witnessed this great play of financial conditions as those who have so thoroughly enjoyed it in the past. It has been a long time, in fact out of the memory of many, since a play has been produced that has won the universal praise shown this drama and the fact that it is based on existing conditions in the lives of some of our money kings of today makes it stronger in commanding the attention of those in all walks of life. The United Play Company has done much, too, in holding "The Lion and the Mouse" at the high plane established at the very outset. This is the company that played "The Royal Slave" here two weeks ago.

The Legislative Grind

At the close of the third week of the legislative session this year there has been no record in the house 186 bills, as against 107 at the same time in 1913. Two years ago the senate had dumped 155 measures into the hopper at the close of the third week but this season only 107 senate bills have been offered. It is estimated that at the close of the period at which bills may be introduced, probably next Monday, there will have been offered about two-thirds as many proposed laws as in the year 1911 two years ago. So far as the house bills are concerned the chief reason for the smaller number may be traced to the fact that the legislative reference bureau is drawing many of the bills and Director Sheldon is endeavoring to get together the members who have bills on similar subjects to introduce and include them in the preparation of one bill that will embrace all of the points sought to be presented. The work of the legislative bureau will save more than a thousand dollars in printing alone beside much autonomy in the way of amending bills for grammatical and typographical errors.

The longest bill that has been introduced was offered in the senate Friday when the educational code bill was presented by Earl Malory. Almost every state organization has participated in making recommendations to the state superintendent, and the school commission about desired changes in the school laws. Rather than to attempt to amend the various sections several able school men and lawyers have been working several weeks on a school code that will be considered in its entirety. It is of such far reaching importance that it is planned to have extra copies of the bill printed so that all inquirers may be supplied with copies.

Where is the organized lobby of former years? is a frequently asked question around the state house. No one seems to be able to answer the question and it is apparent that the times have changed and that representatives of special interests have learned that the present membership is not generally amenable to old ways of making and killing laws.

A bill has been introduced that seeks to change the law to close saloons at six o'clock instead of eight in the evening. Temperance workers disclaim any particular interest in the bill and the saloon men say that it was not offered at their suggestion, so it is fair to presume legislation on the liquor question will not attract much attention at this session.

Since overtime has been almost entirely cut out among the employees at the house end of the state house it is apparent that the jobs are seeking the men rather than the decrepit and the infirm seeking the sinecures. Former employees who came at the beginning of the session this time expecting big pay for doing little work have quit in disgust rather than wait for the rush period when they can become attached to the pay roll.

Governor Morehead recommended in his message that the convicts at the penitentiary be set to work doing the printing that is required for the use of the state. He advises that the legislature make an appropriation for the machinery and for the salaries of expert printers to do the supervising. Two state printery bills have been introduced but neither contemplates any connection with the penitentiary. City and country newspapers all over the state are not taking kindly to the idea of a state printing establishment and protests are beginning to come to the ears of the members. The sponsors for the state plant are asking for an appropriation of a hundred thousand dollars.

The local insurance agents associations are behind a proposed law that will level fire insurance rates throughout the state. The insurance companies admit that they are getting higher rates than necessary in some towns but justify their rates on the theory that in other towns competition has beaten the rates down below the cost price. As it is they say that Nebraska has not been a profitable insurance field for the last few years.

The companies are not asking for the law that the agents want but they are not in a position to oppose it. The plan contemplated would make the rates the same in towns of similar size and operating under similar conditions as to fire fighting facilities. The equalizing of the rates would be enforced by the state insurance commission. The agents insist that rates should be established on a scientific and mathematical principle and when once so established should not be cut and slashed by irresponsible agents of "wild cat" companies.

About one hundred out of the total one hundred thirty-three statesmen at Lincoln have ideas on hunting and fishing laws. Some want the open season on chickens and quails abolished and some want the open season extended. It is a safe guess that the annual fee for fishing will be wiped out so far as local fishermen are concerned.

Red Barns in Nebraska

Many new barns are being built in the rural districts in Nebraska. Building material dealers in all sections of the state report an unprecedented demand for barn lumber and red paint. Next to the home, the barn is the most important building on the farm, and wherever red barns exist there frugality and prosperity abides supreme.

The rapid construction of new barns in Nebraska is lifting the farming industry of this state into a higher zone of utility and is establishing a new era in our industrial progress. No community can proceed far into its agricultural economy until its stock are well sheltered and its crops are properly housed.

Rural Carrier Examination

The United States Civil Service Commission announces an open competitive examination at Red Cloud and Blue Hill, Nebr., on February 27, 1915, as a result which it is expected to make certification to fill the vacancy at Inavale, Nebraska, and other vacancies as they may occur on rural routes at post offices in the above named county, unless it is found to be in the interest of the service to fill any vacancy by reinstatement, transfer or promotion. The compensation of a rural carrier is based upon the length of the route and ranges from $184 to $1,200 per year.

An eligible register for the position of rural letter carrier for each county will be maintained. A person must be examined for the county in which the post office that supplies his home is situated. As a result of such an examination he may become eligible to appointment as rural carrier at any post office in such county. A rural letter carrier after one year's satisfactory service may be transferred to the position of clerk or carrier in a first or second class post office, to the position of railway mail clerk, or to other positions in the classified service, subject to such examination as may be required by the civil-service rules.
