A well graded yard or lawn planted with ornamental trees, vines or bright flowers, is one of the most attractive features that will help the appearance of your home.

Now that the electric light plant is on a paying basis why not light up Webster street? A few modern lights along our streets would transform the appearance of our city. The cost would not be large and it would pay in comfort, advertising and satisfaction.

We are all looking for warmer weather to come so that the Mayor may issue his proclamation requesting every one to clean up. At one of the business men's dinners there were several good plans advocated for a clean up day. Now is the time to get these plans ready and assist the city authorities.

Rev. J. L. Beebe will deliver the anniversary address to the Odd Fellows this year on Sunday, April 25. This is the first time in fourteen years that the order in this city has observed this day. Preparations are being made for the event and we may confidently expect that the attendance will be large.

The Lincoln Herald is authority for stating that the recent failure of "The Purity Butter Co.," for one hundred thousand dollars was due to exploitation. It says that the promoters deliberately fleeced the confiding public which purchased "stock" in this concern.

We would very much like to see a flower garden on every dwelling place in the city this summer. Nothing cheers the passer-by like a profusion of beautiful flowers. At the farmer's institute held here last fall it was shown that this country is well adapted for the cultivation of all kinds of flowers and specific information was given how to do this in the best manner. By all means let this be a banner year for flowers.

Some time ago the Chamber of Commerce decided to invite the interschool track enthusiasts to meet in this city. It will take some preparation to conduct this affair with success and the time to commence to get ready is at hand. It will not be long before this event and this city should do everything in its power to make this a success. It will not be a success if the preparations and arrangements are left to the last moment.

There will not be many potatoes planted this year on Good Friday. The oldest inhabitant says that this is the first time in the history of this county that such a condition existed. However he says that he will take his axe and chop a hole in the ground and plant one potato anyway and that will insure the rest of the crop if the time ever comes when the fields can be plowed. Those who miss out still have the hundred days and we may have potatoes after all.

The delegation of boys from the agricultural class who are in Lincoln attending the annual stock judging contest conducted by the state university will have an experience that will remain with them for many years after they have been graduated from school. Each boy will judge all stock and the best judge will draw a prize. This prize however will be, the least valuable part of the program. The boys will learn by actual judging and the advice of the experts just what goes to make up a good horse, a good cow or a good hog. Many a man has learned when too late that he could not judge a horse and it has cost some men many dollars and a great deal of vexation simply because they could not tell a good horse from a poor one. Boys who expect to become farmers need to know how to judge stock and this experience will enable them, in connection with their studies in the high school, to intelligently carry on their business without any haphazard guess work.

Last week's issue of the Chief contained an engraving of the domestic science class of the high school, and the paper was printed in green ink. The editor gave as a reason for the latter "stunt" the fact that both St. Patrick and himself had a birthday last week, but the excuse was too thin. We don't know just what some of those maidens have been doing to Bro. McArthur, but we can see through it all a deep-laid plot to get revenge by painting the whole class green. This should be a lesson to the young ladies if they are again tempted to be disrespectful to a bachelor editor.—Webster County Argus.

We appreciate the fact that Bro. Edison noticed the enterprise on our part in printing the domestic science class engraving also the fact of the paper being printed in a color in keeping with St. Patrick's day, and while we have always given Bro. Edison credit for being a deep thinker, yet confess he shows ability along this line beyond the average in seeing "the deep laid plot etc". While we do not deny the bachelor editor position, yet we have not as yet found the same to carry with it anything of such an unpleasant nature, as to cause us to resort to "cradle robbing".

The Legislative Grind

The chiropractors have made a loss and hard fight for official recognition at this session and with apparent success. There are a few medical doctors in the legislature but they have been unable to stem the tide for the mechanical practitioners. The lawyers of the House grasped the opportunity to punish the physicians for their activity in helping to pass a bill that would permit a litigant to try his own case before the county court. The latter bill, however, failed by one vote to pass in the Senate.

Almost every legislative session sprouts booms for governors and congressmen and United States Senators, but this year little of the sort has been heard. Patterson of Lancaster, republican member of the lower house, is developing into a real statesman and and it is believable that he may cross swords with Reavis for congressional honors at the next primary. Nichols of Madison is being joshed about running against Dan Stephens but he hasn't admitted the ambition yet. Senator Beal is deporting himself in a manner that warrants his friends in urging him to try conclusively with Moses P. Kinkaid in 1916. It would be impossible to pick a probable candidate for governor out of either party.

State officers are giving diligent attention to the legislature and particularly Attorney General Reed, Auditor Smith and Secretary of State Pool are always ready to lend their assistance in settling some knotty point for the solons.

Representatives Thad Scott of Hamilton county offered a motion Saturday that the House cease giving so much attention to matters concerning Omaha and Lincoln, and devote a little more time to legislating for the "unorganized territory." Mr. Scott is a democrat but he has all of the fighting qualities of the untrifled populist of twenty years ago.

There has been little railroad legislation. The roads have had representatives on the job watching things all all of the time but nothing of importance has been attempted. The most interesting measure was the proposed Osterman bill to cut the U. P. right of way down to 200 feet instead of 400 feet along the main line.

Consolidation of departments and bureaus has had its full share of attention and the finance committee of the House has labored diligently to cut down the high salaried heads of departments without crippling the efficiency of the administration of the laws. Salaries are being held down or, in some instances, cut a little, but nowhere has there been a raise. It is currently reported that the sentiment in the Senate and the House is quite different in the matter of consolidations.

Taylor of Custer started something when he demanded a stricter accounting at the state university. He lost his fight but he has not lost his courage and, although he resigned from the committee in charge of school finances, he is working as diligently as any of the members to get at the facts in the case. He hopes to awaken the public to the necessity for a more discriminating interest in the agricultural activities of the university.

Cities that want to do so may provide by levy for band concerts on the streets and in the public parks.

The state constitution provides that the biennial meeting of the legislature must be in session for not less than sixty days or more than ninety days. By the time this has been printed in the weekly papers the House will have been in session the minimum number of days but the Senate is four days behind and consequently the session can not close before next Tuesday with strong probability that joint adjournment can not occur before April 5 or 6. The House worked Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday nights of last week to keep up with the sifting committee and on Friday night it was nearly midnight when the fight on the chiropractic bills was settled. Altogether the passed week has been far the busiest of the session and has been full of spectacular events. The House has passed the bill that extends the city limits of Omaha to include South Omaha, Benson, Florence and Dundee, now suburban towns. It has also placed the stamp of its approval upon another Omaha bill, one that permits the city water plant to generate and sell electric current in competition with the present privately owned electric company. A bill authorizing the publication of the personal tax rolls of every precinct has been passed and a bill of special interest to newspaper publishers, making libel laws less stringent, barely secured enough votes to pass it.
