An Excellent Play

Owing to the fact that a portion of their tent outfit did not arrive in time the Arington Stock Company engaged the Orpheum theatre for their initial performance Monday evening.

The house was taxed to the limit of its seating capacity by a large and well pleased audience.

Tuesday the delayed outfit came and for balance of week the Arington Company play under their own commodious waterproof canvass.

For opening night the bill was "For the Man She Loved," a play replete with tragedy, pathos and comedy. It were needless to comment upon individual work in the presentation. All most excellently done, is sufficient. But we cannot refrain from mention of Mr. Frederick Boone's masterful rendition of a fretful old man, "Col. Worthington," also the snappy vaudeville work of Hyland, Grant and Hyland. Many more pretentious companies must take their hat off to these.

"Back Home" the bill for Tuesday drew a large audience—nearly every seat in the big tent being occupied. And this against "Uncle Tom's Cabin" at the Orpheum. The feature play will be presented tomorrow (Friday) evening and engagement closes with a rollicking good one Saturday night.

Buy Coal Now

Arthur L. Palmer, executive secretary of the fuel administration for Nebraska, writes to fuel administrator J. N. Clarke of Hastings, in which he recommends the largest publicity to the necessity of coal consumers laying in their winter's supply of coal this summer and for each customer to purchase the winter's full quota of coal supply before the end of the summer period if possible. It seems from the efforts the government is exerting in this direction that there is some urgent reason for this, and in some quarters it is thought there is a desire to have this as fully accomplished as possible to enable the United States later on to increasingly furnish France and Italy large supplies of coal to help those countries better prosecute the war.
