First Big After-War Film

"The Common Cause," the first big "after-the-war" screen production to be exhibited after the signing of the armistice that made the world "safe for Democracy," is to be shown here, at the Orpheum for two days, beginning on Monday next. This screen sensation, is one of the most artistic and appealing photoplay dramas ever gazed upon. It covers the war from the time Belgium was ravaged until the present time, with the American and Allied arms victorious; and yet it is not what one would call a "war" picture. It tells the story of Allied aims, the reasons for the entrance into the struggle of Britain, France, Italy, America, etc., and shows how the American marines turned the tide of the war at the memorable battle of Chateau-Thierry by turning the Huns off the road to Paris. There is a beautiful story running through the picture and some splendid battle scenes, but there is a total absence of the horror that has characterized the war itself and many of the pictures depicting it.

Death From Accident

The remains of John A. Springer, whose accidental death, in St. Joe, was announced in this city on Monday, arrived here on Thursday, and were taken to the home of his mother, Mrs. Ida Springer, in the Second Ward.

The lifeless body of the young man was found in the street, running past the three story rooming house, in which he resided, in St. Joe, at 11 o'clock on Sunday evening, and investigation discloses that his death was accidental, he either stumbled and falling backwards on reaching the head of the stairs, or becoming dizzy headed or ill, at this time. The stairs, in question, make a bend about half way of their length, and at this landing there being a window, the body crashing through same and falling to the street below.

John Springer was a Webster county product, being born in this city, May 4, 1891. He served on the Mexican border and up until a few months ago, when he went from St. Joe to Kansas City, to learn the barber trade, had, for the past three or four years, been a trusted and valued employee of the Morris Packing Co., of St. Joe.

To his mother and two sisters, the Misses Lenore and Nettie Springer, the deepest of sympathy is extended, as it would seem they have recently been blessed with more than their share of grief, being prior called to give up husband and father and son and brother.

Funeral services, in charge of Rev. John D. Hammel, was conducted from the Methodist Episcopal church, this Thursday morning, at 10 o'clock, after which interment was made in the city cemetery.

Mrs. Chas. Turner Summoned

When the angel of death called for Mrs. Chas. Turner, at her home in the First Ward, late Friday afternoon, after but a few days illness, it not only left a husband and two daughters bereft of all for which wife and mother stand, but removed from earthly existence one who had only begun to reap the fruits of a life of toil and devotion to her family.

Besides those mentioned above the lady leaves two grand-children, Maxine and Milton Simpson, one sister, Mrs. Grace Baurer, one brother, Robt. Cummings, an aged mother at Burns, Wyoming, one half sister, Mrs. Alice Townsend, together with other relatives to whom sympathy is extended.

Funeral services, in charge of Rev. J. L. Beebe, assisted by the Royal Neighbors, of which the deceased was a member was conducted from the home, Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, after which interment was made in the city cemetery.

Baptist Church Notes

Sunday School at 10 a. m., prayer meeting Wednesday evening at 7:30. Rev. Harper and daughter, Miss Grace, will spend this week and part of next on the Lone Tree field, as next Sunday is his regular appointment there. The work at that place is growing in importance.

On account of the damp evening and the lack of street lights the G. A. R., W. R. C. and other older people were prevented from attending the reception given Rev. Harper, Friday evening. Never-the-less there was a good attendance. The address of Brother Harper was more suggestive than elaborate. As one speaker viewed it, the most prominent thought suggested was a life of service. The following ministers were present and took part in the service:

Rev. I. W. Edson, pastor of the Baptist church of Oxford, Revs. J. M. Bates, John D. Hammel, J. L. Beebe and V. M. Harper of this city. A fine lunch was served. The church parlor was nicely decorated, in which a table of sufficient size to accommodate the ministers and their wives and a few others, was placed, and around this table flowed, "a feast of season and flow of soul." The meeting served to create a get-together Christian spirit.
