We believe that it pays to give our customers service and satisfaction; that is why we want to sell you a

DE LAVAL CREAM SEPARATOR

No matter what anyone may tell you, there is only one speed at which you can turn a separator crank and get all the cream and cream of uniform thickness, and that's the speed indicated on the crank.

Every hand-operated cream separator has the correct number of turns of the crank handle per minute plainly indicated upon the crank handle. Every separator, of whatever make, will do better work at the proper and indicated speed than at any other.

BELL SPEED-INDICATOR
The "warning signal" that insures operation at the proper speed.

Every one of the NEW De Laval's has a Bell Speed-Indicator. When you slow down, the bell rings. It warns you every time the handle goes around too slowly. You can't be mistaken about it.

The Bell Speed-Indicator adds nothing to the price but much to the value of the NEW De Laval.

Come in and see how the Bell Speed-Indicator works.

THE ONLY DEMOCRATIC PAPER IN WEBSTER COUNTY

Wouldn't you be surprised to look north some morning and see a fountain of oil shooting up in the air? Stranger things have happened.

Slowly the League of Nations assumes practical form. Presently it will be completed and approved. There will be no appreciable jar of the earth and a whole lot of today's would-be critics will calmly remark, "It is the best thing that ever happened."

The fifth "Victory Loan" will be floated next month to "finish the job." Don't let interest lag. It's a duty you owe the brave boys who stopped the war, and it's your last chance to make an investment that will make you proud of your effort. And it will be safe and profitable. What more can you ask?

Considerable excitement is to be noted regarding what is termed "sleeping sickness." Of one thing the scientists are certain and that is the present cases are not what is known as "African sleeping sickness." This being caused by the bite of a fly. Ordinarily a large number of deaths are preceded by a period of unconsciousness and people are too ready to ascribe this common experience to a new disease and become unduly alarmed.

We are not sure that we are, or that any other one-horse editor is, competent to discuss the merits of the league of nations question. We do know this, though, that the greatest convention of famous statesmen the world has ever seen is now in session at Paris, many of them men whom we admire greatly for their lofty character and able statesmanship, and if they are unanimous for it, and it is said they are, the rest of us ought to be confident that it will bring about the world peace which we desire so much.—Concordia Kansas.

And while we are all thinking on the subject of a world-peace, why hark back to Washington, Adams, Jefferson, et al. for authority? In their time conditions were vastly different. A sparsely settled small number of these United States were but just free from war with England. Weeks and months of perilous travel lay between us and Europe. The talk of these wise men was adapted to and in accord with the times in which they lived. Today messages go there in a few moments, travel is but a matter of days, and soon will be counted in hours. We are next door neighbors and the matter of more unity in aims and actions has become a vital necessity. The League of Nations is called for by conditions which cannot be ignored. There are differences of opinion as to details, but the principle involved is almost universally admitted. The differences are being discussed and adjusted. A simple peace treaty is in effect a league of nations. The real League in process of construction is but an amplified peace treaty.

At midnight of March 31st, control and management of the Red Cloud Chief reverts to the hands of Mr. A. B. McArthur, and yours truly, Browne, will be looking toward new fields. Just getting fairly acquainted and beginning to feel like a citizen, the veteran civilian resigns in favor of the young soldier, and it becomes a forced duty to say adieu. Personally the editor regrets parting with many newly-made warm-hearted friends, is loth to leave the arena in which he has been a part of some good political battles, is sorry to go out of business circles where he was received as a welcome guest. To all these—the friends and neighbors who have made him at home, the business community which has treated him royally, the leaders in local politics who have stood by him loyally—he here, by tenders hearty appreciation. He goes out with regret but with pleasant thoughts of the community to be left behind. He goes out with skies clear, goes out with full consciousness of duty well done regardless of whether it is appreciated or not, goes out with best wishes for the success and prosperity of the new-old management and with the feeling that his year in Red Cloud will be always a pleasant memory. Once again, good friends, adieu.

Our Sovereignty And The League of Nations
There is a lot of clap-trap being circulated through the land to the effect that it would be a fearful thing for this nation to enter the League of Nations because in so doing we would lose a part of our sovereignty.

There the statement usually stops, as if that much were all-sufficient; and many are unthinkingly accepting it in that way, as if it were to say to a man "by doing this you lose half your life."

It is a bogey, a mountain out of a mole-hill, built up for purely political and propagandist purposes.

What is sovereignty?

Simply the freedom to do as we please, regardless of its effect upon others. It is the same whether applied to a nation or an individual. The only absolute sovereign is the savage who has no government, no obligations, and whose only rule of conduct is his own sweet will.

Civilization has for thousands of years been clipping off some of the sovereignty of each individual, for the good of all, and we are all better for it. Nations have been doing the same thing. We all give up some of our sovereignty, for the protection of organized, civilized government. Nations do the same thing. Every treaty we ever made surrendered some of our sovereignty, and the only nation that would not recognize that fact, was the Hun nation which made treaties scraps of paper and became an outlaw for so doing.

Every recognition by us of the rights of other nations upon land or sea or in the air, surrender a part of our sovereignty. We surrendered a part of our sovereignty when we entered the war, and when we entered the peace conference and are bound to do so every time we recognize another nation as being our equal and entitled to certain rights and privileges which are to be regarded by us and not violated.

We gave up a very large chunk of our sovereignty when we promoted and entered the unified command and put our armies under the direction of Marshal Foch, yet who is there to say it was not the best big move made during the war? It won the war and saved many nations. A league of nations will do as much for us in peace.

A selfish, cowardly nationalism bids us come home and leave the work half finished. Humanity says, "Keep on."

We have made a good fight, now let us keep the course and follow the faith.

The one who is regarded with the greatest esteem in a community is the man who regards all others with esteem.

Writings to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Wells of this city, Fred N. Wells, formerly a State Journal reporter, then at Bordeaux, France, said he expected to be moved from that place very soon. He didn't know what the prospect was for getting home, but thought it could be no worse from where he might be sent than it would be while he remained at Bordeaux. He had just heard from Miss Velora Pilcher, formerly a member of the State Journal staff, who went to France with a recreation unit from Leland Stanford. She was then at St. Lazaire and from her letter indicated that she had seen some narrow escapes just before fighting ended. She expected to be there for a long time to come. Mr. Wells had been very ill, but was in better health when he wrote.—State Journal.

Brazil was discovered in 1500 by Pedro Albuqez, the Portuguese navigator. It was colonized by Portugal early in the sixteenth century. In 1822 it became independent. From that time until 1889 it was an empire; since 1889 it has been a republic.
