TO THE PUBLIC

Feeling that an item appearing in the report of the Commissioners' Proceedings does an injustice to myself and brothers, desiring to state that during the past thirty odd years we have supported our father in comfort at our various homes.

During a part of the past year he has made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Kinser, nearer the central part of the city, a change in many respects which promised more comfort for the old gentleman and to which we cheerfully acquiesced, still contributing toward his maintenance. We have been, at all times, willing to contribute anything in the way of service or money that was necessary, on request of our sister, and are both surprised and grieved at our brother-in-law, without any notice whatever, of making the representations to the county board which were made according to the report.

There was no necessity nor occasion for such. The old gentleman is assured of a home and if he chooses to remain with his daughter, I still stand willing to continue to advance my portion of the expense toward his maintenance.

ROAD BUILDING

SHADE TREES ON ROADSIDES

Nine-Tenths of Highways in New York Entirely Void of Vegetation—Plan to Improve.

By investigations just completed by the New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse, it has been found that nine-tenths of the roadsides in the rural districts of New York state are entirely void of shade trees. When this is considered along with the fact that last year New York state paid out of the state treasury about $30,000,000 for the construction and maintenance of road beds, it shows that the state is not yet awake to the great need and the great possibilities in rural roadside improvement.

A preliminary survey has just been made by H. R. Francis in charge of the landscape extension work of the College of Forestry.

During the survey, studies were made of such important features in rural roadside improvement and beautification as good and bad varieties of trees found along the highways, views and vistas obtained from the highways, the effects of the shade trees on crops in adjacent fields, the possibilities of the covering of barren embankments and the planting of some desirable sort of vegetation where overhead wires are in large numbers. One of the principal features studied was the condition of the roadbed as affected by the presence or absence of shade trees.

Few people in the state will be able to visit the wonderful national parks of the West, but an increasing number of people will own automobiles and use the highways of the state. Many, if not all, of these highways may easily become state parkways of beautiful trees and shrubs. Trees grow like weeds under the climatic conditions existing in New York and with varied scenery of intense interest the highways of the state will eventually become as beautiful as those of any other state in the Union.—Green's Fruit Grower.

A Merry Christmas A Happy New Year

Is my wish to you and yours. May the year of 1920 be one happiness and prosperity.

I also wish to thank you for your liberal patronage in the past and I shall endeavor to merit a continuance of the same during the new year.

Birds Foretell Weather Change.

Swallows are unerring in their instinct. If they are flying high, then an umbrella is not an immediate necessity. But if, when they are in search of their food, they skim along at a low altitude, it is safe to predict a downfall at no great period. The long-distance flyers, such as gulls and rooks, are well worth attention. They are not only weather-wise, but wise in common sense. They never venture far from home when bad weather is brewing.

Watering House Plants.

Plants should be watered with a spray, not with a cup or a glass. Those that can be moved should be placed where the water will not damage carpets or floors; those that cannot—such as large ferns or palms—should have something spread on the floor beneath them to catch the water as it drips. The water must be sprayed from above so that all the leaves receive it; this carries off the dust and is the only natural way for a plant to receive water.
